SOCIETY GIRL WOULD FLY TO EUROPE

"FLYING DEBUTANTE"

Miss Marion Green, a licensed pilot and one of the most prominent St. Louis society girls, is negotiating with a syndicate in New York that proposes she fly as relief pilot on a trip to Europe. The "Flying Debutante" said further plans must remain a secret for the present.

MINE HOME BOMBED; 5 SAVED

WASHINGTON, Pa., Aug. 13.—(AP.)—A boarding house at the open shop Tyler mine of the Washington Gas Coal Company was bombed early today.

Five Negro occupants, all nonunion miners, and the wife of one of them, escaped injury.

Windows in several nearby houses were broken by the bomb, which was placed on the front porch.

Mrs. Howard Smith, proprietress of the boarding house, heard intruders on the porch, and investigated. She saw the burning bomb and called to the boarders. One of them, Frank Jackson, shoved the explosive across the porch with a poker where it let go a few minutes later as the occupants of the house ran for safety.

MOBBED BY MINERS

By International News Service.

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., Aug. 13.—Despite the fact that 50 special deputies were on duty, a serious situation prevailed here today, and further outbreaks were anticipated, as county officials and Col. L. E. Connelly, of the Ohio National Guard, continued their investigation of the beating of C. V. Nichols, Wheeling W. Va., taxicab driver, by a mob of 800 men and women near here, at the Provident coal mine late yesterday.

The mob broke through a cordon of 25 special deputy sheriffs and attacked Nichols, who had been hired, he said, to transport strikebreaking miners to the mine and back to their quarters. He was almost unconscious when rescued.

Mexicans Liberate Rancher

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—Robert Edward Pirie, an American citizen, who was kidnaped by bandits two days from his ranch near Vincente Guerrero, Mexico, has been freed, Edward H. Mall, American consul at Durango, informed the State Department today.

The bandits turned Pirie loose upon payment of a ransom of 200 pesos.

Mall had requested the Mexican government to send no troops in pursuit of the bandits, fearing to endanger the prisoner's life.

Presumably he obtained the rancher's release through personal negotiations.

Hiker, 60, to Start on 15,000-Mile Walk Tomorrow

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 13.—A 60-year-old man announced here today that he expected to leave at 3 p. m. tomorrow on foot for St. Louis as the first lap on a 15,000-mile walk.

"Last year," said the gray-haired weather-beaten Edward Fromm, "I walked from Jacksonville, Fla., to New York, then to Chicago, and back to New York."

He issued two challenges, and if either is accepted he may delay the start of his journey.

"I'd like to take anyone in the 60-year class on for a 1,000-mile hike," he said.

His other proposal was to meet anyone in a "five-day-five-night, no-food, non-stop" walk on the Boardwalk here. Water would be permitted.

Girl Asks $50,000 'Balm'

A suit for $50,000 charging alienation of the affections of her husband, was filed by Mrs. Marvel R. Hantman against her mother-in-law, Mrs. Sophia Handmacher, of Beaver Falls, in Common Pleas Court here.

Mrs. Hantman, a former Philadelphia model, is now living with her parents in McKeesport and will shortly leave for New York to join the cast of a Broadway production. She was married to Eugene P. Hantman on November 12, 1926, and they separated June 1927. Mrs. Hantman claims Mrs. Handmacher persuaded her son to leave her, and is therefore suing her for $50,000.

MAN HELD, ANOTHER HUNTED, IN SHOOTING

Joseph Tedesco, 48, of Industry, Elizabeth township, is recovering in McKeesport Hospital from a gunshot wound in the right ankle received during a quarrel at his home with two Italians. Paolo Gatico, 28, of McKeesport, an alleged assailant, was arrested and state police are seeking another man.

Postpone German Flight

By International News Service.

DESSAU, Germany, Aug. 13.—Owing to reports of storms over the Atlantic, the hopoff of the Junkers planes, Europa and Bremen, for New York, was postponed today. The airplanes were to have started on the transocean flight between 6 and 7 o'clock this evening. The pilots hope they can get away tomorrow, but it is uncertain, owing to the vagaries of the weather.

The tanks of both planes have been filled with fuel, the motors tested and a maximum supply of food placed on board.

According to present plans the Europa will take off first, while a great Junkers passenger plane carrying 20 passengers will circle overhead. The Europa will be piloted by Johann Ristics and Cornelius Edzard, two of Germany's foremost air aces.

The Bremen is to follow immediately piloted by Capt. Herman Koehl and Friedrich Loose, who have won their aerial spurs through long years of flying.

Sacco Still Refuses To Eat

BOSTON, Aug. 13.—(AP.)—The first lull in the Sacco-Vanzetti case in many weeks found both prisoners apparently better spirited today in their cells at Charlestown State Prison, although Nicola Sacco's continued refusal of food has alarmed some of his friends, wso are considering asking Warden Hendry to frighten him into eating with a threat of forcible feeding.

Sacco will have fasted 28 days, today, but has yet to show any sign of weakness.

EARL SMITH TO GO, RUMOR SAYS

One of the biggest baseball deals in years, involving three prominent members of the Pittsburgh Pirates, will be engineered at the close of the National League season, according to a well-founded report received here today.

Hazen Cuyler, Johnny Morrison and Earl Smith, according to the report, will be sent to Brooklyn next fall in exchange for Dazzy Vance, Arnold Statz and Walter Henline.

According to reports, the trade was virtually agreed upon on the Dodgers' last visit to Forbes Field.

The deal, should it go through as reported, will give the Robins a catcher, a pitcher and an outfielder for a pitcher, a catcher and an outfielder.

Cuyler recently was fined for indifferent playing and subsequent

One More Day, Then— "Sally's Shoulders"

Another day! Then Sally, Beatrice Burton's most captivating character in her most fascinating serial novel, "Sally's Shoulders."

"For the first chapter of "Sally's Shoulders" starts in the first edition of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph—Monday morning. It will continue daily, with its thread of romance intermingling with the darker and bolder patterns of life.

No one would ever call a girl of Sally's type angelic. She would be entirely too human for that.

But she is a strange bit of femininity with many of the virtues and no apparent vices of the race to which she belongs. She is one of the million.

But for that matter, so is the story. It is clean and wholesome. It is bright and interesting and mirrors the life of today. It is one of the gripping stories of the year—but it still is without taint or crudity. More than anything, it is an engrossing story of a group of human beings who at all times act their parts naturally. You will be surprised how many people are in it that you have known for years.

Yes, "Sally's Shoulders" and the folks in it are true to every-day life.

Something might happen that you cannot start in the beginning. In that event, ask your newsdealer for the first few back chapters. He will be able to supply you by Wednesday of next week—two days after the story begins.

But the demand might be too heavy. There is a certainty if you start at the beginning. After that—there'll be no stopping.

MAN HURT JUMPING OFF BRIDGE IS RECOVERING

AGRAM, Aug. 13—Josef Tiljak, policeman, killed himself with a service revolver because of his unrequited love for Stefia Vidacic, who was "Miss Jugo Slavia" in a recent beauty contest.

'DEAD' 3 YEARS, CASHIER RECOGNIZED, NABBED

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 13.—The police here are awaiting the arrival today of authorities from Lincoln, Neb., to claim Jack M. Patterson, former bank cashier and village treasurer of Union, Neb., who was arrested yesterday on the identification of a former neighbor as the man wanted for alleged embezzlement and believed drowned three years ago

Patterson has unraveled a strange story, covering his activities during the three years that he was believed drowned, but he denied the embezzlement charge. He was arrested yesterday when "an old Nebraska neighbor," driving through from the West, recognized him as he filled the tourist's tank with gasoline at a filling station where he has been working under the name of Frank Smith.

"I was going back after I saved enough money to pay my debts," Patterson told the police, "but the money came pretty slow." He said he was "up to his neck" in about $10,000 of personal debts, but was not guilty of the alleged embezzlement.

Patterson said he had planned suicide on the night of his disappearance, but had lost his "nerve." He was believed drowned when his auto was found deserted on a beach.

RUBBER TIRES ON TROLLEYS

By Universal Service.

BALTIMORE, Md., Aug. 13.—A street car equipped with rubber tires and roller bearings was tested in regular service here today.

Jarring and jolting and noise are claimed to have been noticeably reduced by the innovation. Less power is required to operate the rubber-tired car.

The wheels resemble the usual street car equipment. They are cushioned by rubber tires which circle the hubs and relieve the roller bearings of the jolts caused by irregularities in the track.

NO MORE GUM-CHEWERS TO TESTIFY, SAYS JUDGE

SPRINGFIELD, O., Aug. 13.—(AP.)—No more will witnesses in municipal courts be permitted to chew gum while testifying. Judge Golden C. Davis announced that use of chewing gum by witnesses will be barred. The judge declared witnesses were hard to understand when they were chewing gum.

THE WEATHER.

Showers late tonight; warmer tomorrow. Not much change in temperature.

LEWIS FOR MELLON AS PRESIDENT

YORK, Pa., Aug. 13.—State Treasurer Samuel S. Lewis in a statement today declared in favor of Secretary of Treasury Andrew W. Mellon as Republican candidate for President. Financial and economic questions which will remain unsettled at the time of the 1928 election, Mr. Lewis said, would require a man of "profound economic insight and mentality of the highest order."

"I know of no man who fits into the picture better than Secretary Mellon," he asserted, adding that the Treasury secretary's demonstrated ability would be needed in solving problems of farm relief, debt reduction, lower taxes, prevention of inflation from gold reserve, fair treatment of corporations and proper tariff adjustment.

Mr. Lewis in the 1926 primary campaign directed the fight in Central Pennsylvania counties for the Pepper-Fisher ticket. After discussing President Coolidge's "do not choose" statement, he went on:

Pennsylvania at this time does not have a favorite son in the sense in which that term is generally used. Furthermore, Pennsylvania is usually eliminated at the outstart for technical party considerations. But if there ever is or will be such a thing as the office seeking the man then Pennsylvania cannot be lightly passed up in the present critical juncture. For Pennsylvania enjoys the distinction of being the home state of the man who in the public appraisal and evaluation of these human forces and influences back of, and responsible for, our present state of un-

REVOLT IN PORTUGAL QUICKLY NIPPED; PRESIDENT AIDS

LISBON, Portugal, Aug. 13.—(AP.)—Another attempted coup d'etat in Portugal has been quelled. In one dramatic incident President Carmona and members of the cabinet were under fire. The President grappled with one of the assailants, disarming him.

The movement, instituted by a military group displeased with recent cabinet changes, was begun yesterday morning to place Naval Commander Filomeno Da Camara in power.

Three officers forced their way into the ministerial council chamber in the president's residence and handed Gen. Carmona a letter demanding the resignation of the government.

One of the officers, Lieut. Moraes Sarmento, attempted to give the views of the army on the political situation. The minister of war ordered his arrest.

Lieut. Sarmento backed to the wall, drew a revolver and fired repeatedly at the group of ministers. One shot wounded the secretary of the finance minister and another punctured the clothing of the minister of justice.

Today perfect order was reported to exist in the entire country, but the government was concentrating forces at the Amadora aviation camp for any emergencies that may arise.

FLOGGING EPIDEMIC FLARES ANEW IN SOUTH

13 BEATEN AS NIGHT RAIDERS STRIKE

By Universal Service

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 13.—Thirteen more cases of floggings and night raids in Alabama were reported today as the campaign to link the Ku Klux Klan with the numerous cases of lawlessness waxed warmer.

Nine cases were reported from Talladega county in the eastern part of the state. Victims of night riders and hooded hoodlums are emerging from their stage of fright and persons intimidated through cowardice or because of business or personal relations are regaining their lost nerve, according to reports of officers.

FEDERAL PROBE ON

Federal officers today were investigating the reported flogging of two young men who were taken from the Margaret mines in St. Clair county, strung up to a tree by their wrists and severely beaten by masked men. The cases in Talladega county are: P. H. Debardeleben, a young Sylacauga druggist, who was whipped and ordered to leave his business and depart from the county; Ben Purvis, who appeared to be a victim of hatred or vengeance; Clarence Wyatt, a small farmer who eked out a living by furnishing cross ties to a railroad; M. C. Mathis, 60, a farmer; B. W. Price, principal of the Winterborough Consolidated School, in front of whose home a cross was burned and an order left for him to leave the county; W. C. Malone, druggist; J. V. Jones, a photographer; Snap Ragland, a Negro, and W. P. Germany, a farmer.

From Calhoun county came a report today of the whipping of Will Rutledge, a Negro, who was taken from his home at Morrisville and lashed after being accused of bootlegging. Rutledge told officers the masked men stole $46 in cash from him.

ACTRESS BEGS TO DIE AFTER TAKING POISON

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—Mrs. Catherine Kemper, aged 24, until a month ago a member of the "Gay Paree" company here, begged hospital physicians to let her die after she had swallowed poison in her hotel room late yesterday while despondent. She will recover. "She had the blues because she is getting a divorce from her husband," said Lorelei Rhinelander, her chum. "I guess she is broke, too." A note written by Mrs. Kemper read: "Please notify Charles L. Kemper at the United Vaudeville Artists Hotel, Forty-sixth street, New York City." He is said to be her husband.

OLGA QUITS APPEAL IN PLAGIARISM VERDICT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—Olga Petrova, playwright and actress, has withdrawn her appeal to the Supreme Court for reversal of a lower court judgment of $7,500 obtained against her by William Henry Roberts for alleged plagiarism. Attorneys for Petrova offered no reason for her abandoning the appeal. Settlement of the case out of court was believed to have been made. Roberts won a verdict on his charges that Petrova's presentation of the "White Peacock" was an adaptation of his "La Rubia."

NEW MATRON INSTALLED, GIRLS FIGHT WAY OUT

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 13.—Thirty girls rose in rebellion at the El Retiro School, near San Fernando, slapped women attendants and threw stones at policemen who tried to halt their flight. They boarded busses and rode to Los Angeles, where they laid their grievances before juvenile authorities. The girls, all under 18, objected to a change in matrons and methods at the school, a county constructive institution. Authorities said they need not return until conditions are remedied.

PAIR MUST DIE FOR TRIANGLE MURDER

FRANKLIN, LA., Aug. 13.—(AP.)—Mrs. Ada Bonner Lebouef, 37, mother of four children, and Dr. Thomas E. Dreher, 55, the father of three, and Mrs. Lebouef's alleged suitor, yesterday were sentenced to die on the gallows for the murder of James L. Lebouef, husband of the convicted woman.

Both received the verdict calmly, and declared they had nothing to say before Judge James D. Simon pronounced sentence. The date of the execution has not been set.

Mrs. Lebouef had her hair bobbed yesterday. It was her first public appearance with her shorn tresses.

James Beadle, the third of the trio found guilty last Saturday night of murdering Lebouef, was sentenced Wednesday to life in the state penitentiary.

MOVIES AID COOLIDGE TO RUN GOVERNMENT

RAPID CITY, S. D., Aug. 13.—President Coolidge has confessed that the moving picture news reel is helping him to run the government. He sees the reels often at the summer White House, he said, and they give him vivid ideas of events and problems throughout the world that he might not otherwise appreciate. He believes the news reel is performing an important function in keeping the American people informed about current events.

LIBERTY BRIDGE TO OPEN BEFORE SCHEDULED TIME

The new Liberty Bridge, across the Monongahela River, likely will be opened a week or 10 days before Thanksgiving, the original date set for its completion, it was announced today by V. R. Covell, chief engineer of the Bureau of Bridges. Bids for the paving of the span and its south approach will be opened by the County Commissioners and the County Controller next Wednesday, and the paving will be started soon.

SEIZE 2 STILLS, ARREST TWO IN TARENTUM RAID

WASHINGTON, Pa., Aug. 13.—(AP.)—Idor Solomon, 25, charged with disorderly conduct and attempting to incite to riot in connection with a Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration, was discharged yesterday on the latter charge but was fined $5 and costs for disorderly conduct. Solomon was arrested last Tuesday during a parade of Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers.

WIFE WATCHES AS BRITISH ACE FALLS

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 12.—Before the horrified eyes of his wife, Capt. Arthur V. Rodgers, British war ace, was killed in the crash of his tandem-motored monoplane, "The Angel of Los Angeles," yesterday. It was the second fatal accident of Hawaiian flight planes.

Mrs. Rodgers was one of the first to reach the aviator's body, shrouded in the parachute which had failed to open. Lifting a corner of the fabric, she said:

"Thank God he left me a fine little girl."

Rodgers was flying alone in the specially designed monoplane when his machine went into a sudden nose dive over Montebello, Park after taking off from the Western Air Express field. His parachute failed to open and he fell 250 feet to death.

Rodgers is the third man entered in the Hawaiian flight to die.

CASTLE SHANNON PLANE TO BE CLOSED SUNDAY

Announcement was made today by the Pittsburgh Railways Company that the Castle Shannon incline would be shut down Sunday morning at 1 o'clock to allow repairs. The plane will open to service again Monday morning at 5 o'clock.

CURWOOD'S DOCTORS GIVE UP HOPE

OWOSSO, Mich., Aug. 13.—(AP.)—Fighting a seemingly losing battle to save the life of James Oliver Curwood, author and conservationist, physicians today admitted that there was little hope for Curwood's recovery.

They expressed the belief that the author may not live another 24 hours. Curwood is suffering from an infection and has been seriously ill for several days.

In a desperate effort to fight the infection, slowly sapping the author's strength, one of his daughters, Mrs. Antonio P. Jirus, of Detroit, gave her blood in a transfusion operation yesterday. Curwood rallied for a time, only to lose strength later.

exampled national prosperity, ranks only second to President Coolidge himself.

I think it will become more and more clear that the crucial and dominant question concerns our prosperity. It seems an extravagant statement, but it is nevertheless a fact that never before in the history of the world has any nation or people enjoyed the widespread affluence and well-being that has been ours since Coolidge became president. The big question is how to keep this prosperity.

Obviously, the situation is out of the ordinary. A sane, safe and conservative man endowed with special equipment and experience along financial and economic lines is needed.

I know of no man who fits into the picture better than Secretary Mellon.

DICK BARTHELMESS TO FIGHT FOR CHILD

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—(AP.)—Five-year-old Mary Hay Barthelmess will not be taken to Singapore if her father, Richard Barthelmess, movie actor, has anything to say about it. The mother, Mary Hay, dancer, was remarried in April to Vivian Bath, British rubber merchant of Singapore, and announced her intention to try and persuade her former husband to give up their daughter. Under the divorce decree the child was to spend six months with each parent.

UNEMPLOYED PROBLEM IN FLOOD AREA AIDED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—A plan to help relieve the unemployment problem in the Mississippi River flooded districts has been worked out by the Department of Labor and the American Red Cross, it was announced. All unemployed workers from the region will be given an opportunity to become cotton pickers in Oklahoma, Arizona and Western Texas.

Mother of four children, Ada Bonner Lebouef, 37, top, and Dr. Thomas E. Dreher, 55 (lower right), father of three children and Mrs. Lebouef's alleged sweetheart, were sentenced to die on the gallows yesterday at Franklin, La., for the murder of James L. Lebouef, husband of the convicted woman. James Beadle, lower left, the third of the trio found guilty of the murder, was sentenced to life imprisonment Wednesday.

CROATIONS BUY OAKLAND SITE FOR BUILDING

Another modern building is planned for the Oakland district, it was learned today, with the sale of 79x127 feet of vacant property on the north side of Forbes street between McKee place and Oakland avenue for John Murphy & Co. to the Croation Fraternal Union of America for a consideration of $40,000.

Leo J. Coyle & Bro. were the brokers.

The site is in the rear of the recently completed office and warehouse building of the John Murphy Company which fronts on Fifth avenue opposite the new Montefiore Hospital.

Plans for the building are now being prepared. It will house all of the executive offices of the union as well as large auditoriums.

A two-story business building at 515 Third avenue, near Grant street, First Ward, has been sold by Sam Paripovich to the Revere Land Company at private terms. The lot is 24x122 feet.

A three-story brick residence, at 415 South Aiken avenue, Eighth Ward, lot 50x150 feet, has been sold by Charles Scanlon to Audrey C. Spittell for a private consideration.

A brick residence, at 2800 Beechwood boulevard, southwest corner of Monitor street, Fifteenth Ward, lot 40x122 feet, has been sold by Max Zeff to Jerome Apt for a private consideration.

Building permit applications placed on file today included:

Twenty-sixth Ward—Sol Leff, brick store, 1909-15 Perrysville avenue, $12,000; D. Grain, frame dwelling, Center avenue and Meier street, $5,000.

Twenty-fifth Ward—M. V. Brewer, two brick and shingle dwellings, 421 Catoma street, $5,000.

Fourteenth Ward—C. L. Pierce, brick garage, 1424 Beechwood boulevard, $1,000.

Eighteenth Ward—C. Richer, alterations, 441 Sylvania avenue, $2,250.

Fourth Ward—R. J. Pritchard, concrete block garage, rear 145 Robinson street, $500.

There were 530 mortgages placed on record during the week amounting to $2,707,253.62, according to the report of C. C. Stotler, secretary of the Title Guaranty Company.

Of these, 40 were purchase money mortgages amounting to $510,775.45, and 490 were straight mortgages amounting to $2,196,478.17. The straight mortgages included 178, amounting to $1,111,043.00 to corporations, 182 amounting to $633,120 to building and loan associations, and 130 amounting to $452,315.17 to individuals.

Plans for a $400,000 addition to the David B. Oliver High School building in Brighton road, Twenty-seventh Ward, have been filed with the Bureau of Building Inspection. The J. G. Fullman Company has the contract.

A one-twelfth interest in a property containing 441x289 feet at the northwest corner of Fifth avenue and Neville street, Oakland, and also in 66¼x170 feet at the southeast corner of Ellsworth avenue and Neville street, has been sold by Richard Jennings, Jr., and Mrs. John G. Jennings to the E. H. Jennings Brothers Company. The two pieces combined form one of the largest vacant tracts remaining in the vicinity of the Cathedral.

The Atlas Development Company has sold to A. F. Loeb 11 lots in the Wildwood plan, fronting Wildwood road, Maplehurst avenue, Gibsonia and Pinehurst road.

Weather Conditions.

High pressure is building up over the East. This morning it spreads over the upper Lake Region, and eastward over the Canadian provinces and southward over the Atlantic coast states to Georgia. The western low pressure areas appear to be concentrating over the central and southern plain states, and, as a result of the low pressure development, showers and thunderstorms were general in the central plains and eastward to Indiana and Northern Ohio. Also in scattered places in the Rocky Mountain states.

The temperature changes were slight, but generally towards warmer.

THE DAILY PICTORIAL — THE SUN TELEGRAPH — GENERAL NEWS SECTION
SATURDAY, AUGUST 13, 1927

CITY'S FAIREST TO BE PICKED AT OAKMONT

"Miss Pittsburgh 1927" ascends the throne today.

Before a crowd expected to number more than 5,000 spectators at the Willows Pool, Oakmont, five capable judges will select Greater Pittsburgh's representative daughter and her alternate this afternoon.

Another set of judges will name 23 leading contenders as winners of individual titles offered by the 23 motion picture theaters participating in this year's quest, which will mean nine-day vacation trips to Atlantic City and Washington.

The entrants were lined up at the Buick Motor Company, Baum boulevard and Aiken avenue, and after photographs had been taken and the girls registered, they were loaded into automobiles and paraded through the city. Starting from the Buick company, the procession traveled down Baum boulevard to Bigelow and along to Seventh avenue; to Liberty avenue to Fifth; up Fifth to Grant and from there to the Boulevard of the Allies out to Morewood; back to the boulevard again and over to Penn avenue; out Penn to Frankstown, over Hamilton and out the Frankstown road to Oakmont.

Approximately $75,000 worth of the latest model Buick cars conveyed the girls to the Willows pool.

The program will begin at 1:30 o'clock, following an automobile parade carrying the 92 finalists from East End to the downtown district at noon and thence to the Oakmont resort. A buffet lunch will await the contestants at the pool. The master of ceremonies for the afternoon will be Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell, while the judges will be as follows:

Selecting "Miss Pittsburgh" and alternate—Frank Vittor, sculptor, formerly on the staff of the Carnegie Institute; Joseph C. Wasson, art connoisseur, one of the early directors of the Carnegie Institute; Malcolm Parcell, portrait painter of Washington, Pa., and well known in local art circles; Raymond S. Simboli, painter, an instructor in painting at the Carnegie Institute of Technology; and Vincent Nesbert, artist, well known as an exhibitor at the National Academy of Design, New York City, and at the Associated Artists of Pittsburgh annual exhibit.

Selecting theater titleholders—J. C. Fontaine, local manager Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; Carlos E. Moore, local sales manager United Artists Corporation; and James A. Alexander, president Columbia Film Service, Inc.

Special street car service is being established by the Pittsburgh Railways Company on the Verona route from Wilkinsburg, while the Green Cab Company is offering special rates for the day from various points of the city to Oakmont. Heavy demand for tickets is reported from the A. G. Spalding & Brothers store, 608 Wood street, downtown, and the Willows pool, where reserved seats and general admission can be purchased.

A special program is being arranged at the Willows for 9:30 o'clock tonight, when the newly crowned beauty queen, her alternate and the theater titleholders will be honored guests. Councilman Harry A. Little will present "Miss Pittsburgh 1927" with a silver loving cup, a present of Max Unger, jeweler, 976 Liberty avenue. Many features are being arranged.

The official theaters who will be represented by finalists are: Stanley-Davis-Clark, State, Liberty, Schenley, Manor, Rowland, Belmar, Arsenal, Plaza and Capitol, Braddock; the Stahl, Arcadia, Ideal, Arcade, Colonial, Hilltop, Capitol (Beltzhoover), Dormont, Bellevue, Garden, Frederick (East Pittsburgh), Hippodrome, Helma and Orpheum.

FASHION QUEEN SEES WOUNDED VETERANS

By ALFHILD LARSON,
Pittsburgh's Queen of Fashion.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 13.—What a day this was. I and other girls competing for the national title of Queen of Fashion started out at 10 o'clock yesterday morning; didn't return until nearly five—and had a wonderful variety of entertainment.

First we drove in three big limousines to Ulysses S. Grant's old home, far out in the country. The log cabin was closed but we peeked in the windows. In the yard were old cannons and souvenirs of the war that have been there for years. The old tumble-down place seemed to breath romance and mystery.

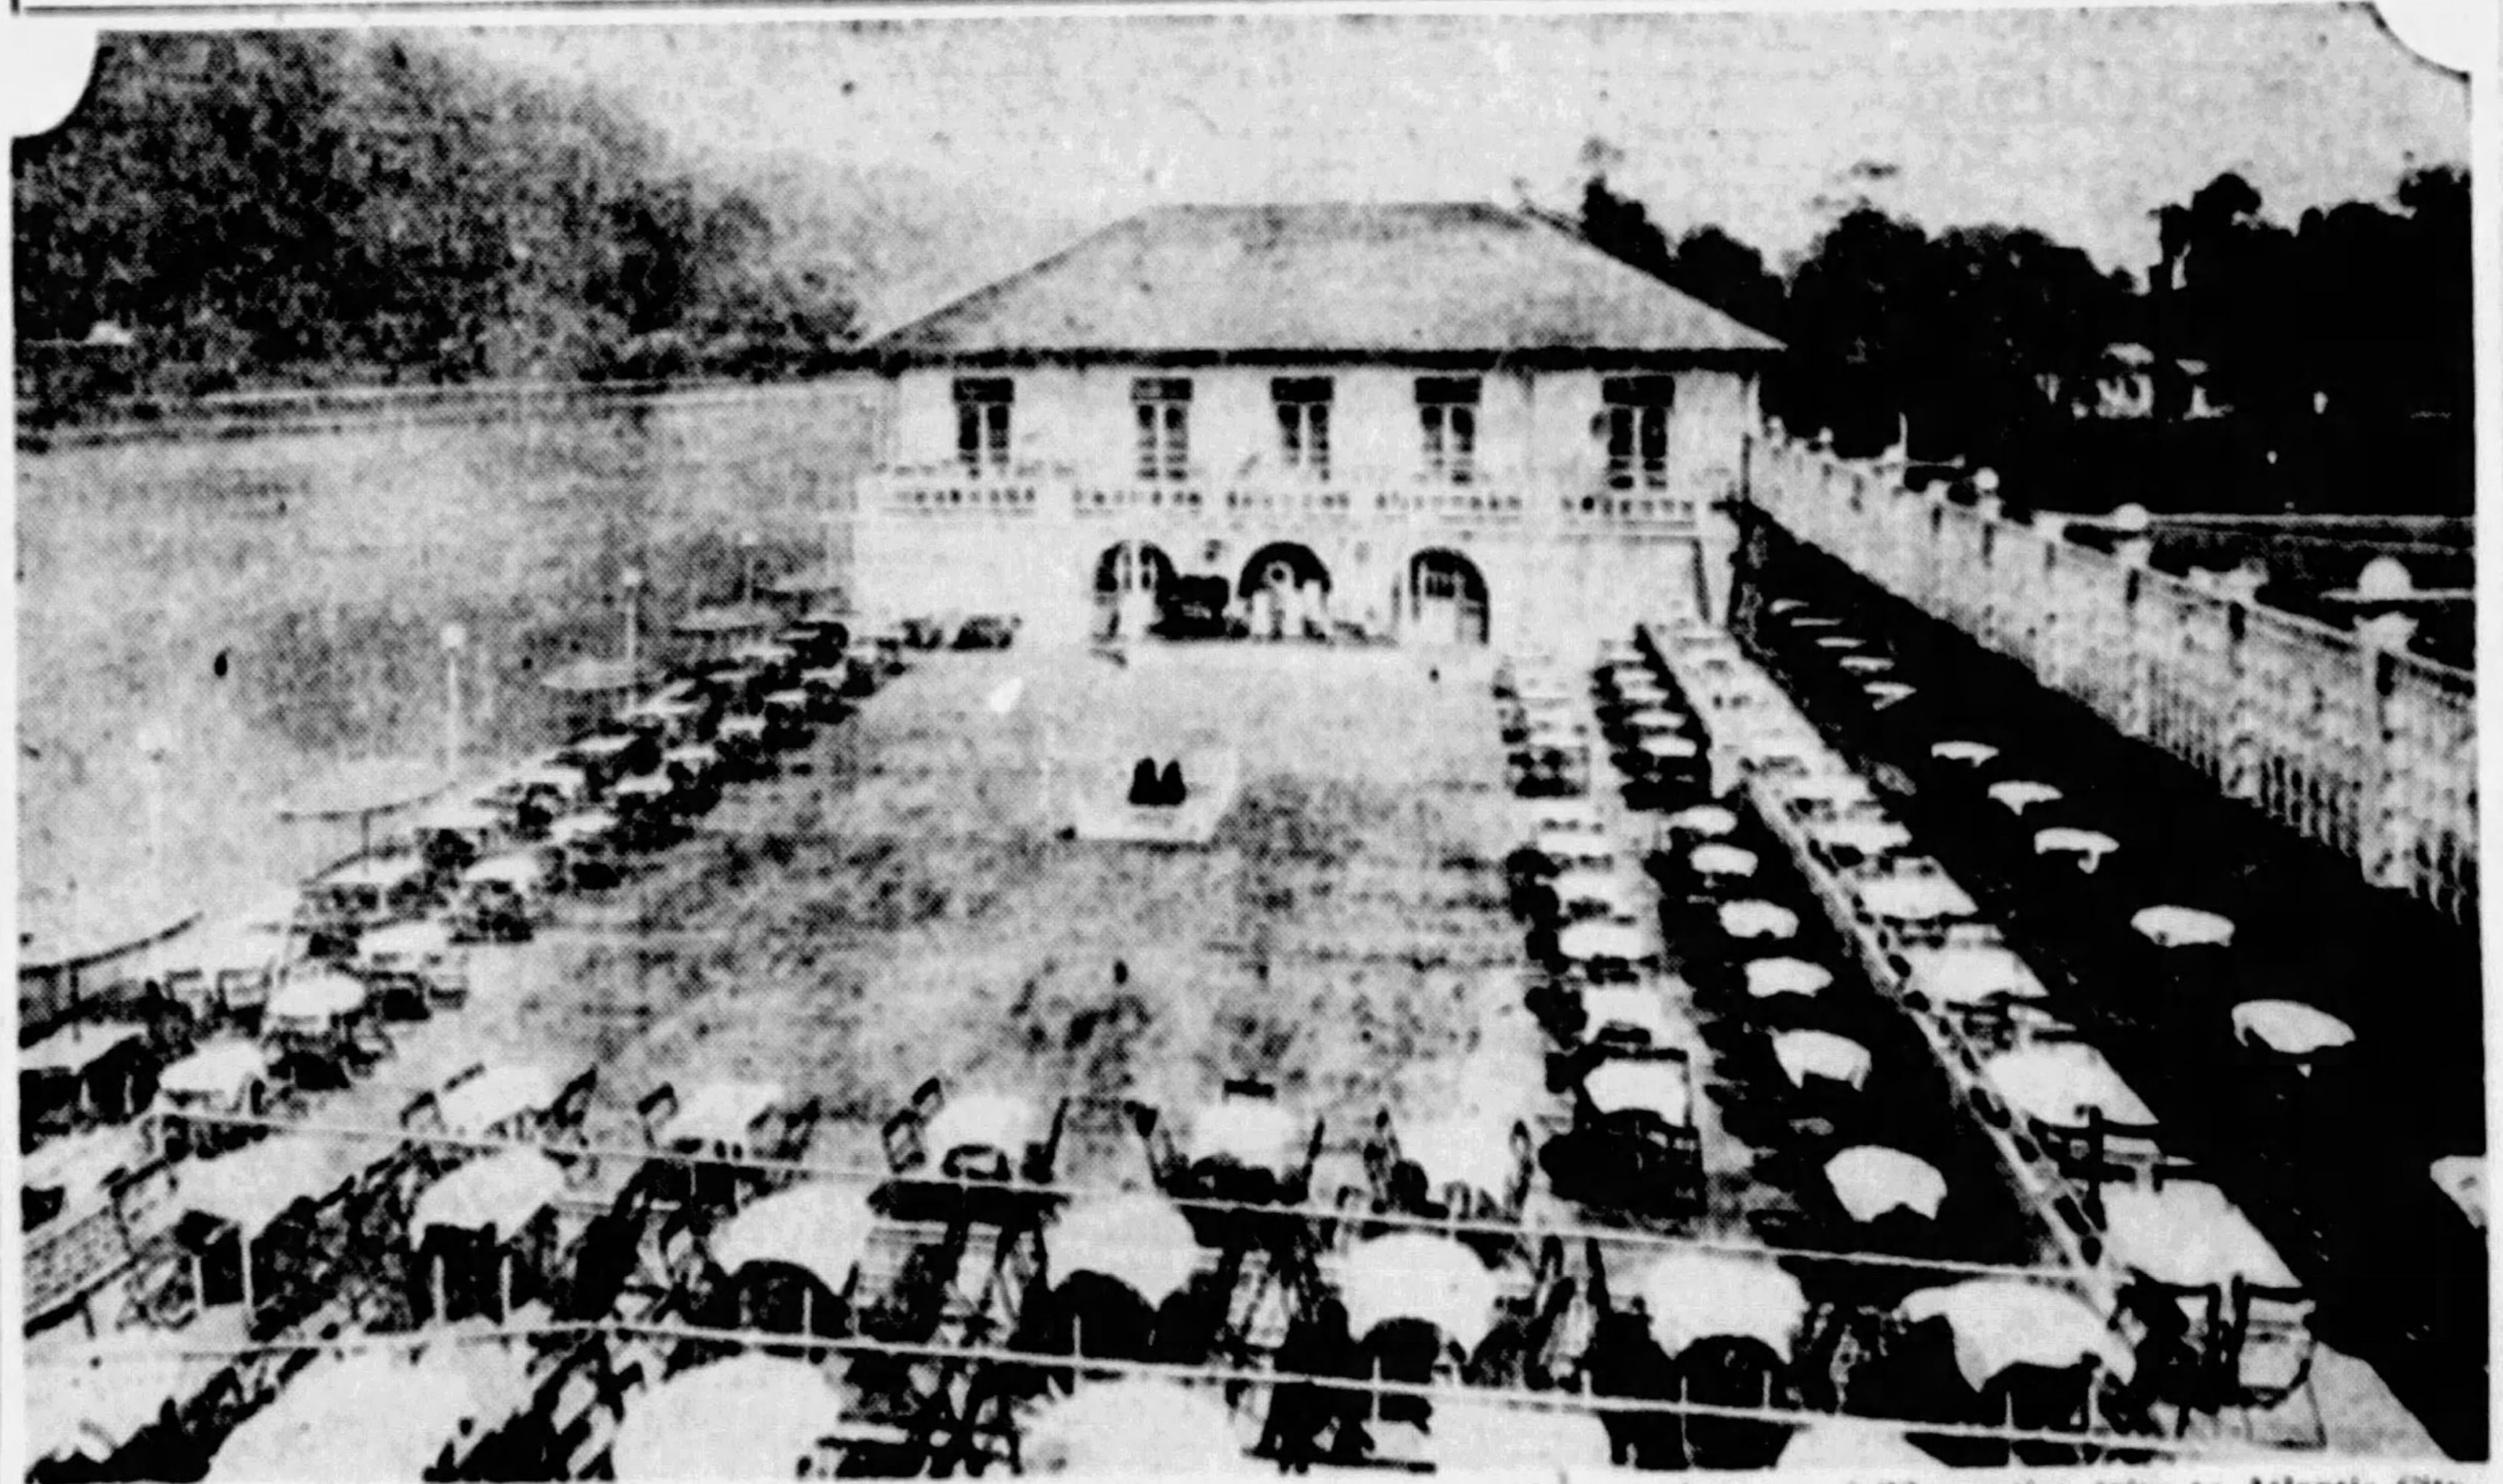
Jefferson Barracks was another stop. We drove all through and ended up at the war veterans' hospital. There are more than 250 wounded men there. It nearly broke our hearts to walk through and try to keep smiling. I never had such an experience. It didn't seem possible they could have been lying ill, almost forgotten, all these years.

I had the most applause at the theater again last night. I'm holding my breath and sitting on the edge of my chair. Going to the ball game today.

ANNEXATION MEETING TURNS INTO ANTI RALLY

A meeting held to hear both sides of the Penn township annexation question in the Thaddeus Stevens School last night developed into an anti-annexation meeting when residents favoring the step failed to appear. Three hundred persons attended.

OAKMONT COURT FOR BEAUTY PAGEANT TODAY



The Willows, Oakmont, where judging of 92 Greater Pittsburgh beauties for "Miss Pittsburgh" title takes place Saturday afternoon. Alternate honor and 23 vacation trips to Atlantic City and Washington, D. C., are also at stake in the competition.

WESTINGHOUSE PICNIC TODAY

East Pittsburgh, Homewood, Trafford and Linhart plants of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company were deserted today while employes and their families, totaling about 35,000 persons, frolicked at the forty-first annual outing and basket picnic of the company at Kennywood Park.

The program included concerts by the Westinghouse Band, the Employes' Chorus and the Kilty Band. The athletic events opened at 11 o'clock with swimming contests, followed by the women's track and field meet. The latter included scooter, kiddie-kar and novelty races. More than 400 entrants were signed for the women's events.

The men's field meet included races for registered A. A. U. men. Children's field events and a baseball game completed the afternoon's program.

SEARCH CONTINUES FOR ESCAPED MAYVIEW PAIR

A police search continued today for George Chester, 27, a former city patrolman, and James Hunter, 31, Negro, mental patients who escaped from the Mayview City Home and Hospital.

His Bible and Mayor Keep Goldstein On Bench

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—(AP.)—Magistrate Goldstein believes in preparedness.

Mayor Walker was sailing for Europe and among those at the pier to see him off was the magistrate, whose term was to expire while the mayor was away.

As the mayor bade him good bye the magistrate said, "Haven't you forgotten something?"

The mayor asked, "Has anyone got a Bible?"

Magistrate Goldstein pulled one out of his pocket and was sworn in for an indefinite term.

FORD'S MAGAZINE RESTRICTED

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—Bound volumes of Henry Ford's Dearborn Independent, containing attacks on the Jewish people, will be withdrawn from general circulation by the Library of Congress and made available for reading only by permit.

Two of the five volumes have been lost.

The remaining three will be deposited in private study rooms with scientific works, rare prints and other works obtainable only under permit.

This was the answer of library officials to suggestions that the magazine attacks be removed from the shelves and the titles struck from the card index.

SEATTLE MAN ELECTED PRESIDENT OF EAGLES

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 13.—(AP.)—Lon V. Westerman of Seattle, Washington, was elected president of the Fraternal Order of Eagles in national convention here. E. D. Ryan, Philadelphia, was chosen vice president; J. S. Parry, Kansas City, secretary; Joseph H. Dowling, Dayton, O., treasurer, and Robert F. Schmidt, Milwaukee, chaplain, and William Keigan, inside guard.

MINNESOTANS BOOST LOWDEN FOR PRESIDENT

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 13.—(AP.)—Members of an executive committee from every congressional district in Minnesota met here yesterday and officially opened the campaign in this state in behalf of former Gov. Frank O. Lowden, Illinois, for the Republican presidential nomination. A telegram of greeting was received from Mr. Lowden. The committee decided to perfect Lowden organizations in every county in Minnesota.

GRAY ATTACKS G. O. P. SLATE

"The men who framed this slate cannot ram it down the throats of the people of the county," said Judge James H. Gray, independent candidate for re-election, attacking Republican organization leaders in an address last night in the home of Mrs. P. G. White, Sharpsburg. Former State Senator C. M. Barr, another speaker, estimated that the organization will go into the fight with a nucleus of 60,000 votes and urged independent citizens to work to overcome that handicap. Senator Barr based his figures on the estimate that each of the 12,000 county employes can produce five organization votes.

SERVICES AT WARREN FOR JOHN N. ENGLISH

WARREN, Aug. 13.—Funeral services for Attorney John N. English, former prohibition director and reform leader in Pittsburgh, who died here yesterday, will be held late this afternoon in the chapel at the Oakland Cemetery. The Rev. Harold Stoddard, of the First Baptist Church of Warren, will conduct the services. Interment will be made beside the body of Mr. English's first wife, Mrs. Lucile Sherman English.

PEDAL BOAT ATLANTIC VOYAGE CALLED OFF

LONDON, Aug. 13.—Edward Patrick Tierney has abandoned his projected trans-atlantic voyage in a 12-foot pedal-driven all-steel boat "Carrie" following a tryout of the queer craft at Dover. The vessel failed to function properly. The Carrie filled with water and was sinking when beached.

TWO ALLEGED ROBBERS HELD IN HOMESTEAD

Homestead police today are holding two Negroes, Harry Stevens, 22, of 537 Third avenue, Homestead, and Roy Gardner, 25, of 537 Third avenue, for robbing Basil Karam, 36, of 348 Seventh avenue, Homestead, of $64.96, in the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad's yard.

RECOVER BOY'S BODY FROM MONONGAHELA

The body of Henry Zalenski, 11, of 706 Sixth avenue, Monessen, who was drowned Wednesday in the Monongahela River at Monessen, was recovered at Sunnyside, near Monongahela City today. It was brought to the Allegheny county morgue.

LOCAL 'SAILORS' END CRUISE

CAMDEN, N. J., Aug. 13.—Nearly 100 happy, smiling sunburned "salty" naval reservists, residents of the Pittsburgh district, returned to this port aboard the destroyer Charles Ausburn after two weeks intensive training of the annual naval reserve practice cruise in New England water.

They left by special train this afternoon for their homes.

For some it was the first time they had been away from home, and although the cruise to New England was full of interest, reflections of home were apparent during their idle moments. The unfortunate part of the whole cruise was the absence of relatives and friends to greet them at the navy yard. They looked with somewhat saddened faces at the cheerful greetings received by the reserves from Camden who also disembarked. Half a hundred pretty girls met the Camden units.

FRENCH PACT TO AID U. S. WAR MEMORIALS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—(AP.)—An agreement designed to aid the American Battle Monuments Commission in acquiring land in France has been concluded and will be signed here in the next few days by state department and French embassy officials. The commission said that under the agreement it would be able to sell to the French government for a nominal sum any land acquired by it in exchange for a perpetual lease to the ground free from any taxation.

ROSENWALD MUSEUM ASSURED ON BIRTHDAY

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—Coincident with the sixty-fifth birthday of Julius Rosenwald, noted millionaire head of Sears, Roebuck & Co., and philanthropist, came the assurance that the immense industrial museum which is to bear his name will be put into construction here some time this year. "Not only is Mr. Rosenwald donating $3,000,000 for the museum project," said Leo F. Wormser, trustee of the museum to be, "but he is spending much of his time on it as well."

COUNTY LABOR PARTY FILES PETITION

The Labor party in the county made a bid for a place on the fall primary ticket yesterday with the filing in the County Commissioners' office of petitions for commissioner, controller and treasurer. Powers Hapgood of 1607 Buena Vista street, filed for commissioner; John Sotis of 1525 Hunter street, Wilkinsburg, for controller, and Edward Horacek of 3429 East street for treasurer.

Other petitions filed today were for District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner for re-election; S. J. Topley of East McKeesport for clerk of courts; City Councilman Robert Garland for re-election; Alderman George S. Wilson, Eighth ward, re-election; Frank T. Holleran, Ninth ward, alderman; Alderman Charles A. Burke, Seventh ward, re-election; Albert J. Henning, Twenty-ninth ward, alderman. All are Republicans.

DEATH ROLL

Dr. C. M. Swindler.

Dr. Charles M. Swindler, assistant chief surgeon of the Carnegie Steel Company, died in his home, 434 Maple avenue, Edgewood, yesterday. Dr. Swindler was born July 19, 1879, at Athens, O., son of Franklin Pierce and Caroline Baldwin Swindler. He was educated in the public schools of Pittsburgh, Shady Side Academy and the University of Pittsburgh. He studied mining engineering and for 10 years was established at Delmar, Nev., as engineer of the Delmar's Nevada Gold Mining Company. Dr. Swindler graduated from the medical department of the University of Pittsburgh in 1911.

In 1913 Dr. Swindler married Ethel Anne Hawkins of Atwater, O., besides whom he leaves two sons, Charles M., Jr., and John H. Swindler; one daughter, Margaret Swindler; a brother, Frank P. Swindler, and a sister, Mrs. Jean Swindler Sorbin.

Dr. Swindler was a member of Soujourner's Lodge No. 693, F. & A. M., a Scottish Rite Thirty-second degree Mason and a member of Syria Temple, Mystic Shrine. He was affiliated with the Protestant Episcopal Church.

For several years he was anesthetist at the West Penn Hospital and on December 1, 1912, he joined the Carnegie Steel Company as assistant chief surgeon.

Dr. Jesse T. Little.

Dr. Jesse T. Little, Dormont oculist, died yesterday at Camden station, near Baltimore, from heart trouble, a few minutes after he was taken from a train en route from Pittsburgh to Baltimore. Dr. Little had lived in Dormont for 20 years and had his office in the Park building. He leaves his widow, and a son, Jesse Little, Jr., who are spending the summer in Kayser, W. Va., with his wife's father. He also leaves a brother, Samuel T. Little of East Liberty.

Mrs. Hannah Laughrey.

Mrs. Hannah Laughrey, 82, died at the family residence, 125 Camp avenue, Braddock, Friday. Although born in Ireland, Mrs. Laughrey was a resident of Braddock more than 45 years. She leaves a son, Charles Laughrey, of North Braddock; two daughters, Mrs. B. Griffin and Mrs. Mary Joyce, of Braddock.

Mrs. Jane Radcliffe.

Mrs. Jane Radcliffe, 72, a resident of the East Liberty district for more than 60 years died yesterday at her home, 147 Mayflower street. Born in Ireland, Mrs. Radcliffe came to this country with her parents, who settled in East Liberty which at that time was largely farm land. She was a member of the Sixth United Presbyterian Church. She leaves four daughters: Mrs. Jennie Hays, Mrs. Louise Taylor, Mrs. Eugene Boyles and Miss Sue Radcliffe; one son, Alex Radcliffe; 16 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren, all of Pittsburgh.

Mrs. Louis S. Stone.

Mrs. Louis S. Stone, 30, of 437 Marguerite street, Wilmerding, died Thursday night in the McKeesport Hospital. She was born in Avalon, and before moving to Wilmerding two years ago, resided in Washington, D. C. Mrs. Stone leaves her husband, two sons, Milton and Louis Stone, Jr.; two daughters, Miss Phyllis and Miss Cynthia Stone; her mother, Mrs. Ella Cutler, of Avalon; four brothers, Frank Stone, of Birmingham, Ala.; Thomas Stone, of Jefferson City, Mo.; William Stone, of Phelps, N. Y., and Albert Stone, of Rochester, N. Y., and two sisters, Mrs. Lincoln Dickey, of Cleveland, and Mrs. T. B. Hudson, of Avalon.

HOLDS OFF POLICE WITH HATCHET

PATROLMAN, AFTER HOUR, CRASHES DOOR

William "Wild Bill" Ewing, 41, (left) barricaded home, 112 Madison avenue, North Side, drove out his family, and smashed interior, defying police with butcher knife and hatchet to take him. Police after hour's maneuvers attracted attention at rear and Patrolman Adam Stork, emergency officer, crashed front door and subdued Ewing, crazed with moonshine, police say. Charges of indecent behavior, inciting to riot, resulted in 90-day workhouse sentence.

Mr. Pompadour -:- What's That—Lonesome? -:- Eyes, Behave!

NO RELATION to "Mme. Pompadour," however. Fooling aside, the wavy-haired lad is Cullen Landis, whose next work before the camera will be in "On to Reno." "On, Stanley—no, Cullen, On!"

JANE WINTON is one of the "Lonesome Ladies" in the photoplay of that name, soon to be released. We guess Lewis Stone must have seen how forlorn she was and tried to cheer her up. What's in those cups we don't know and there's no use asking where they got it.

OLIVE BORDEN can control those orbs of hers, but in the movies, of course, she has to let them run wild sometimes. Olive, we are informed, is to appear in "Come Over to My House."

"Bozo" Snyder to Open New Gayety Season Monday, Aug. 29

Musical shows with more girls and more jokes are announced as the coming season's Gayety presentation at popular prices, it was announced yesterday by Manager J. J. McGee, who has just returned from Broadway conference.

The Gayety is to open Monday afternoon, August 29, with "Bozo" Snyder in a new production proclaimed to be of a higher standard of laugh show, in line with the decision of the Columbia Amusement Company to have all attractions for its circuit of theaters "stepped up." This provides for attractions having as many as 40 to 50 members in each company, every chorus numbering 24 girls. Nothing offensive to good taste is to appear in any Gayety offering, this being an assurance to the thousands of women who last season were added to the Gayety public.

President Sam A. Scribner and General Manager M. J. Joyce of the Columbia New York headquarters came here Wednesday to inspect their Pittsburgh house and direct its preparation for the new season, including redecoration.

Son of Fairbanks Bids For Fame That Was Wally Reid's

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—The perennial promise of finding a youth with a likable enough personality to play in the type of automobile stories that made the late Wallace Reid famous, comes up again. This time Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., is mentioned and more than mentioned—he is signed to play the lead in "The Century Championship," by Frank Richardson Pierce, said to be similar to the racing stories that Wallie Reid's public so enjoyed.

Young Doug's return to Famous Players is an interesting bit of film history. At the time that he was trying to carve a place for himself, he was signed by Famous Players-Lasky. He made one picture, "Steven Steps Out," and then the contract was dissolved by mutual agreement. Now he is back, richer in experience, a better actor and with an undeniable following.

Sharon Lynn, a newcomer to the screen, will support young Doug, and Richard Rosson is named as the director. When this automobile drama reaches the screen, it will have the movie title of "Dead Man's Curve."

Young Fairbanks, by the way, took it much to heart when he was said to be too young to play opposite Corinne Griffith in "The Garden of Eden." In a few years he will feel like paying someone for that compliment.

Zeppelin Hangars Now Studios for Film Producers

Germany is turning her immense Zeppelin hangars into motion picture studios. The latest to be thus used are the hangars built by Count Zeppelin in Staaken, near Berlin, which have been converted into cinema plants by the Filmwerke Staaken. The Phoenix Film Aktien Gesellschaft, a German releasing and distributing company with branches throughout Europe, also is utilizing the Staaken studios for production purposes.

Michael J. Gourland, who is to act as sole representative of both companies in the United States and Canada, has opened offices in New York. Among the films imported are Dostoyevsky's "Crime and Punishment" and Tolstoy's "Power of Darkness," both interpreted by the Moscow Art Players and directed by Robert Wiene, who made "The Cabbinet of Dr. Caligari." Mr. Gourland is also about to release a Lya De Putti picture, completed just before the star left for this country.

PRIDE OF OUR NAVY BASIS OF BIG FILM

Monday evening in the Nixon, "Old Ironsides," a photoplay based on the history of the U. S. S. Constitution, will be presented. After Monday there will be daily matinee and evening showings for a brief season. Among the principals are Wallace Beery, Esther Ralston and Charles Farrell.

Reservations may be made for the remaining weeks of the summer engagement of the George Sharp Production Stock Company in the Pitt. Monday night the company will give its first performance of "My Son," a dramatic story of a mother's love and sacrifice.

William Faversham will head the Keith-Albee vaudeville bill in the Davis next week. He made the great hit of his career through his interpretation of the "Squaw Man," which he revives every once in a while.

Employes of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company will hold their annual picnic in Kennywood today. The special free attraction at Kennywood Park for their entertainment will be the appearance twice daily of Cliff Curran, high-pole daredevil.

West View Park is keeping up its activities. Joe Tyler's Band has been obtained for the two Sunday concerts. Dancers will hear Marty Schramm's Monte Carlo Orchestra through the week.

MANY MOURN DEATH OF PLAYER'S MOTHER

Seldom has the death of anybody in filmland created so much sympathy as that of Mrs. Anna Myers, the mother of Carmel Myers. Carmel and her mother were inseparable and Mrs. Myers' one aim in life was to further her daughter's career and to look out for her interests. Her passing was particularly sad, since Carmel had no warning and had left her mother that morning in the best of health and spirits. Carmel is in the midst of a picture, "The Girl from Rio," which makes it especially hard, in that she must return to work almost immediately.

HENLEY WILL SUPERVISE NEW CODY-PRINGLE FILM

Robert Henley is back to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, following a brief visit in New York, and will direct as his first assignment under a new long-term contract "Mixed Marriages," M-G-M's third co-starring vehicle for Lew Cody and Aileen Pringle. These two players are now completing "Tea for Three." "Mixed Marriages" is an original by Florence Ryerson and Colin Clements.

AARON HOFFMAN'S PLAY BASIS FOR NEW PICTURE

"Give and Take," Aaron Hoffman's play, is to be screened by Universal under the direction of William Beaudine. Jean Hersholt and George Sidney will be co-starred in the production which is scheduled to go into work early in August.

College of Industries - College of Engineering - College of Fine Arts
Margaret Morrison Carnegie College

Each College is a specialized, effective training institution which gives a careful grounding in the tested fundamentals of each subject. Collectively, the Colleges comprise a broader unit which matches the conception of a university as an agency of social and intellectual leadership. There is preparation for, devotion to and effort toward the advancement of pure science no less than toward the balanced preparation of men and women for the arts, the practical employments, the technological pursuits. The serious student may sense the existence of—and his part in—the world-wide community of science.

Faculties are drawn from both the United States and abroad. They number many technical experts. Special lecturers, including foremost American and Continental research scientists, and active executives of industry and commerce, supplement the regular schedules.

Physical equipment in many respects is unsurpassed. Fifty-three acres of campus provide a spacious setting for imposing, efficiently-designed buildings, housing seventy-three classrooms, fifty-six laboratories, fourteen lecture halls, thirteen drawing rooms, thirteen shops, twenty-one studios and six music rooms. Upon or near the campus are twenty-two dormitory buildings.

Registration: September 8th, 9th, 10th, 12th and 13th; Classes begin September 14th. For Night Classes, interviews Monday evenings May 1st to September 1st inclusive, 7:30 to 9:00, thereafter Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings, to September 28th; Registration evenings, September 28th, 29th, 30th, 7:00 to 9:00; Classes begin October 3rd.

SUICIDE THEORY IGNORED

A coroner's jury this morning returned an open verdict at an inquest into the death of Miss Julia Solon, of Grovetown, whose body was found in the Ohio River near Coraopolis Thursday. Miss Solon's death had been reported as a suicide, but after reviewing affidavits made by the girl's mother, Mrs. Anthony Solon, who declared her daughter had been melancholy, and others who had talked with her before her disappearance, the coroner's jury returned its verdict of death by drowning, without mentioning the suicide theory.

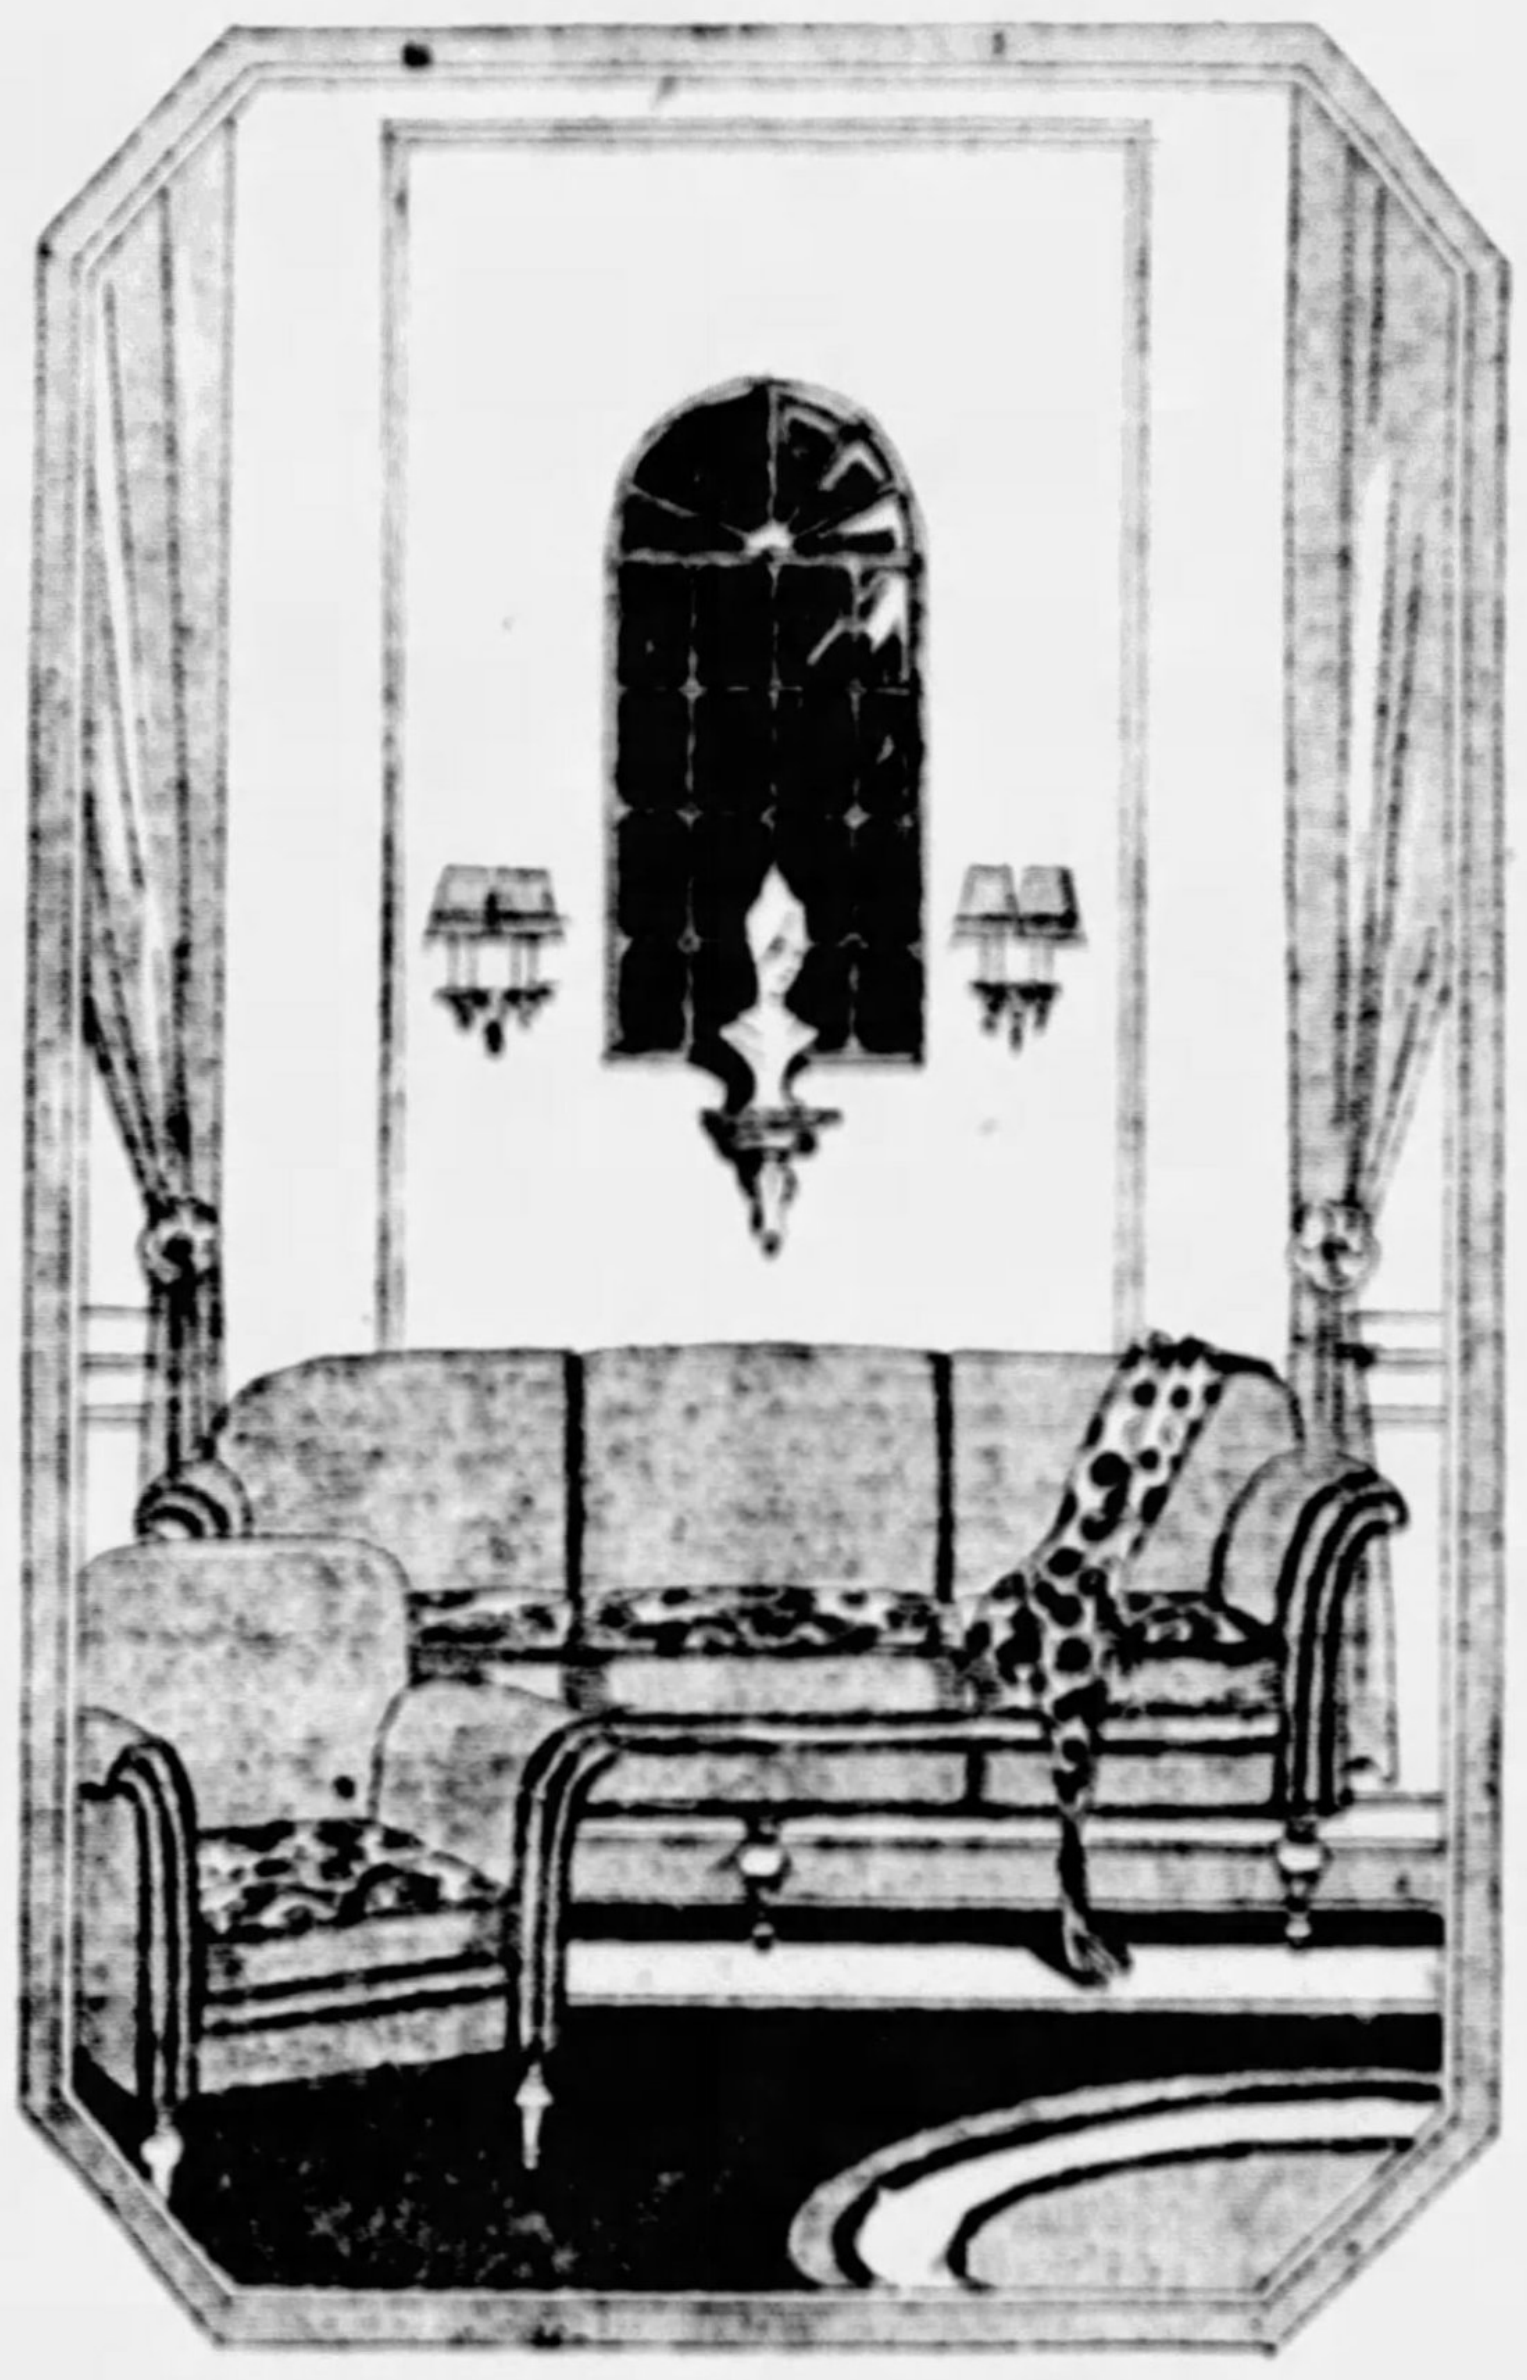
The August Furniture Sale



Considers the Living Room As Center of the Home

Because the living room is the meeting place of the family and the room in which most of us spend the majority of our waking hours at home, it should receive especial consideration in the matter of furnishings.

An unusually large selection of distinctive and beautiful pieces of living room furniture will be found at the low August Sale prices.

Two-Piece Living Room Suites

Sponsors always, of good taste in furniture, this store was a pioneer in introducing Two-Piece Suites for living rooms, to replace the monotonous and cumbersome three pieces.

A davenport with chair to match, may be the starting point of the living room furniture. Decorative interest is added at once, with an odd and colorful chair or two. A desk or secretary, and a number of little end tables and occasional tables for lamps and books complete a charming room.

Suite shown at left is but one example of the unusual values in the August Sale. The clean lines and excellent tailoring reveal to the expert, the high quality of workmanship of the whole. Davenport and chair to match, upholstered in mohair. Reversible seat cushions in mohair and fine damask. Davenport, $145.00; Chair, $70.00.

Important Facts About the Sale

Lower prices prevail, meaning better values.
Wide selections of moderately priced furniture.

Every piece of furniture selected according to Horne standards of quality—in regards to materials, construction, finish and good taste in design.

"BETTY" By FAITH BALDWIN

The Fascinating Love Story of a Girl of the Present Day

Anson Makes Last Attempt To Rewin Betty and She And Bob Are United

leased Helen's portrait was in the papers as a [illegible]

Then one day toward the first of the year, on a Sunday afternoon, a big car drew up to the door of the Warren house.

Betty was alone in the house. She answered the doorbell's ring.

Lorrimer stood there. She drew back at the sight of him. Unconsciously her hand went out to shut the door in his face.

"No—no—"

He pushed past her, his features twisted into a mask of pain. "You must let me in, Betty. I must see you. If you saw a man dying of thirst on your doorstep you'd not refuse him a drink of water!"

"Well," she asked quietly, "what is it?"

He went into the living room. She did not ask him to sit down. Merely faced him and waited.

"Betty—I've been through hell," he told her hoarsely, "and I can't endure it any longer. I could kill myself for the things I have done and left undone. Betty, do you hate me?"

"I never think of you," she told him indifferently, "why should I?"

"I swear to you that I love you. I've always loved you. I . . ."

"You—didn't care much for me—the night of Miss May's party," she reminded him. "Not enough to come forward and say that you believed I was innocent of her shameful accusation."

"I know. But . . . marry me . . . soon . . . marry me, Betty—and let me make up to you for all that I made you suffer," he gabbled incoherently.

"You'd marry me—knowing that I despise you?" she asked, contemptuous, astonished.

"On any terms. If you'll promise you'll marry me—I swear I won't touch you—I won't take advantage of you in any way. You shall be sacred, as inviolate to me as if you were my sister. Not until you come to me of your own free will and tell me you are willing to become my wife in love as well as my wife in law, will I make any claim on you . . ."

She drew back. She thought desperately—he must be mad.

"I can't marry you. I do not love you—and I do love someone else."

The front door closed behind him. He drove to Lorna May's.

That same evening the family assembled for supper included Bob and Peter Leesways. There was a great deal of laughter and teasing.

After it was over Bob drew Betty aside. "Leesways says I can have his car. It's a wonderful night—will you come for a ride with me?"

She ran up and got on her things. Bob drove in silence a moment or two. Then he asked:

"Remember the time I took you riding . . . the very first time?"

"Yes, Bob."

Her heart was beating terribly. All the path was clear before him—before them now. And yet he had not spoken. Of course the excitement of the launching of the company, of Jim's coming home and of the wedding—that had all intervened. And yet—he might have spoken!

"Haven't you anything to say to me?"

"I—to you?"

"Yes—why not—this time?"

They drove on in silence. Betty sat twisting her hands together. Did Bob expect her to—? Evidently—he did.

Her pride . . . ? Well, what did her pride matter? What did anything matter but the fact that they were together again and that all the lovely unknown future lay before them?

"Bob . . . do you still want me?"

"Have I ever wanted anything else?"

She sighed and was immediately in his arms, his good strong arms that held her so safe and so close.

"And we'll be married soon," he exulted. "Betty, are you happy?"

"Never so happy as when I'm in your arms—like this—never so happy as when I listen to your voice."

So presently, on no less a sentimental day than St. Valentine's Day, there was another little wedding in the Warren house.

When they came back Harry had secured a factory in Brooklyn and the real work was about to begin.

The polish is making good now. Betty is working still at the advertising firm which Harry, of course, has left. But she won't be long, Bob tells her. Nor will it be long before Mrs. Warren and Helen have the house to themselves.

Mrs. Warren will keep the house, for "there must be a place for Sunday night supper and everybody coming in and all," she said. Leesways agreed heartily.

But when Helen grew weary of being famous he would have a Sunday night supper club of his own with a wife to preside over it and she would have a ready made husband. But as he told Betty, he was not only ready but made over.

What has happened to Lorrimer no one knows or cares except Lorna May. His sudden turning to her, which was no more than a seeking for a little comfort and a little flattering after he left Betty for the last time, had not lasted long. Lorna is still in pictures.

"Why did we quarrel so?" asked Betty of Bob one night when they were out walking after dinner.

"Because we loved each other too much."

Some time later Betty and Bob went once more up the steps of the little house whose door Bob opened with his latchkey. Betty stepped in and looked about her, a little dreamily.

"It's a dear little house," she said to him. "I'll hate to leave it, somehow."

"Yes, I know. But you must build your own house."

"You understand," she said and kissed him there in the dimly-lighted hall.

Hand in hand they went up the stairs. And youth went with them, and love and tenderness and passion . . . and all of life ahead of them. Bob and Betty, in safe harbor at last, at peace and together.

THE END.

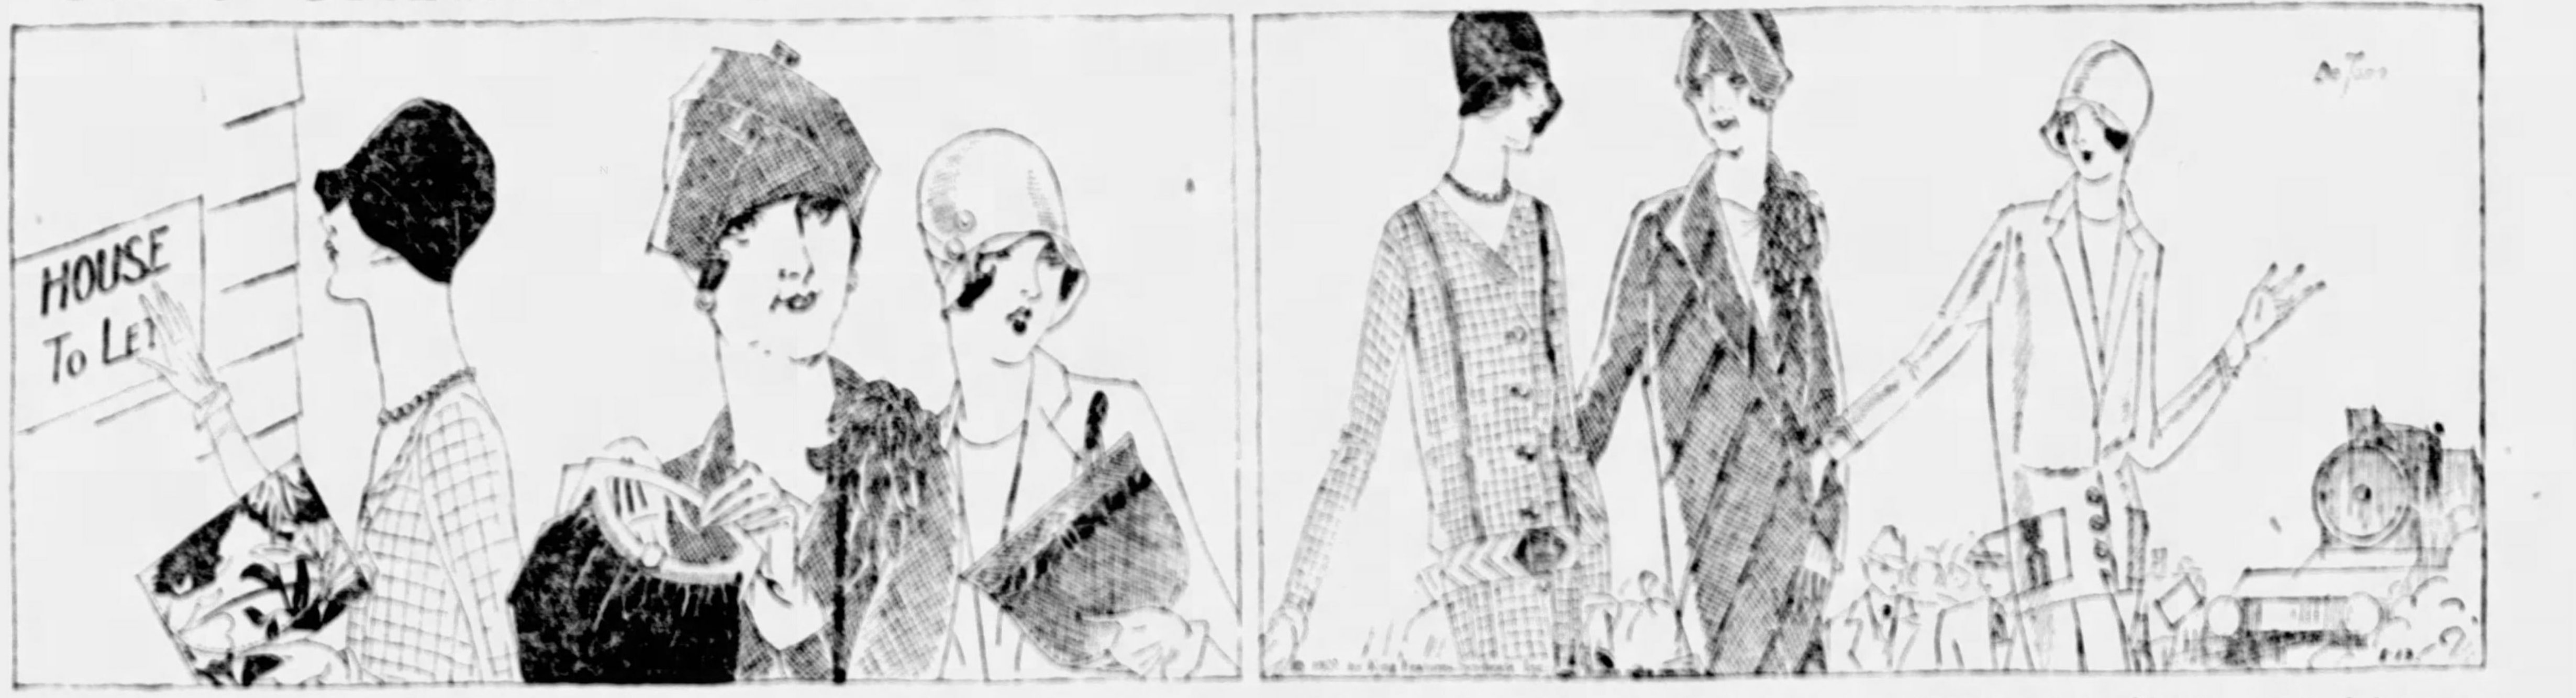
CHIC CHERIE ✣ She Escorts Aunt Em to Town. ✣ LATEST FASHIONS



This is the end of the old farm and someone ought to feel sad about it. Nobody seems to, though. Cherie is examining the sign with an interest that no one can account for. Aunt Em is looking for her watch and Dina is about to signal the taxi driver. Their clothes are really of more interest than their states of mind. Cherie's hat is of soft velvet, her Summer handbag of flowered wool challis. Aunt Em's hat is of two shades of blue felt, her purse has a new shape and an unusual tortoise handle. Dina's hat is of crocheted straw and her purse is the cloche-shaped straw that is just out.

The train being no more than fifteen minutes late they are about to catch it. For the occasion of leaving her home town forever, Aunt Em has put on a coat of kashmir, silk lined, and trimmed with diagonal stitching. Cherie wears a tailored costume of light wool plaid with the properly wide leather belt. Dina has a suit of Autumn green tweed whose only trimming is a little leather design on the cuffs and pockets. They are off to town and there is plenty of money in the bank. Life may be gloomy for some people, but if it can't be made pleasant for our heroines what's the use of having any heroines at all?

My Son's Sweethearts By IDA McG. GIBSON.

They told him it would be there by 6 o'clock.

Phil was chuckling to himself when he thought of a raccoon coat in the early fall, but he had caught some of the irresponsibility he had been praying for, and he whistled when he heard the "honk" of his roadster in front of the house.

There was a knock at the door and Nonnie said, "Mr. Phillip, there's a man out in front says he's delivering a car to you."

"That's all right, Nonnie. Tell him to leave it, and I want you to tell Mother, if she doesn't get here before I leave, that I'm going out to the country and try it out and I will probably not be home for two or three days."

For once everything worked on oiled wheels, and about 11 o'clock that evening Phillip, who really found his raccoon coat was not uncomfortable in the night air, started away from his home.

"Be sure and tell Mother what I told you to, Nonnie," he said. "Tell her I'm sorry I didn't see her before I left."

He called himself a liar for saying this, for he knew that he was devoutly thankful that his mother was still away from the house and consequently he would have no explanations to make.

As he left the city, the moon was high in the heavens and Phil allowed himself the luxury of living over again the glorious episode with Lyra.

He wondered if, when he saw her, her skin would still have that translucent quality as though it was "lighted by a fire within."

CHAPTER LVI.

PHIL AGAIN SEES LYRA.

FOR the first 50 miles Phillip paid little attention to his car, but as the night sped on and he almost had the road to himself, he stepped on the gas and watched the speedometer mark 50, 60, and finally 70 miles, with a kind of triumph.

Out there alone on this nippy, moonlight night, enveloped in the fur coat that had always spelled pleasure to him, that he was happier than he had been since he had last worn it. Life again was beckoning him; there was something for him in the future; he would pick up the tangled threads and straighten them out; he would make something of himself after all.

His thoughts flew back to that morning so long ago when he was first going to see Lyra—the morning he met her at the train, and to his surprise and joy he found that he was at least touching the garments of the youth he had lost somewhere over there in France.

On he drove through the darkness, for the moon had set, and the sun had not yet begun to dye the eastern sky with rose and gold. He looked at the meter. By the dashlight's glow he found he had gone 250 miles. He decided he was sleepy, and as he was entering a small town, he drove to the hotel on the main street, ordered his car taken to the best garage and brought back at 9 o'clock.

Then he went up to the room assigned him and in less than 10 minutes was fast asleep.

For a moment Phillip could not tell where the jangling noise was coming from, but when he fully awakened he caught up the telephone receiver and was told that it was half-past eight and his breakfast would be on the table, as he had ordered, in 15 minutes.

With a cold shower, a hurried slipping into his clothes, and a happy realization that the mood of the night before had not left him, Phillip Wynne Tracy IV went down to breakfast.

He felt like a small boy who was playing hooky. No one knew where he was. Only Lyra was looking for his coming. For the first time since he started home, he ate his American breakfast, from fruit to cakes and maple sirup, with an appetite.

By the time he had finished and paid his bill, his car was at the door, surrounded by a group of small boys to whom a Rolls Royce roadster was something they had dreamed about, but never expected to see.

Horoscopes

SUNDAY, AUGUST 14.

THIS is a day of unimportant planetary direction, according to astrology which finds a benefic aspect dominant.

The rule should be fortunate for the church and those who direct religious work, for there will be much interest in the spiritual side of existence.

Great educational campaigns are to be pushed by the churches and effective missionary work is to be done in universities, the seers prophesy.

Under this sway of the stars self-deception may be more prevalent than usual and it is well to take stock of one's faults as well as virtues.

One of the tendencies supposed to be encouraged today is boastfulness and even misrepresentation regarding personal attainments.

Women should strive toward simplicity in dress and manner, for, through artificial beauty aids, they are supposed to become victims to general habits of deception.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have a period in which changes are made in their surroundings. A great desire for comfort cause extravagance.

Children born on this day probably will be dignified and rather difficult to understand. They succeed through daring initiative.

(Copyright, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

MONDAY, AUGUST 15.

ALL the signs today appear to warn against daring enterprise of any sort, according to astrology. Delays will be more profitable than action in most business matters.

Under this sway creditors are inclined to push for payments, but the wise will put them off until a more auspicious rule of the stars prevails.

There is an aspect that is read as fairly good for selling, but buying should be avoided until a more favorable day.

Contracts should not be signed under this planetary direction, which makes for dissatisfaction and even losses.

Care should be exercised regarding letters and especially those that carry love messages.

Women are subject to influences making for restlessness and selfishness. They may be exacting and difficult, especially in money transactions.

It must be remembered that women have been going through a period of preparation for exacting public work and they will show their new efficiency in the year 1928.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a year of diversion and pleasure.

Children born on this day probably will be fortunate in their domestic relations. They should succeed by steady work and persistent endeavor.

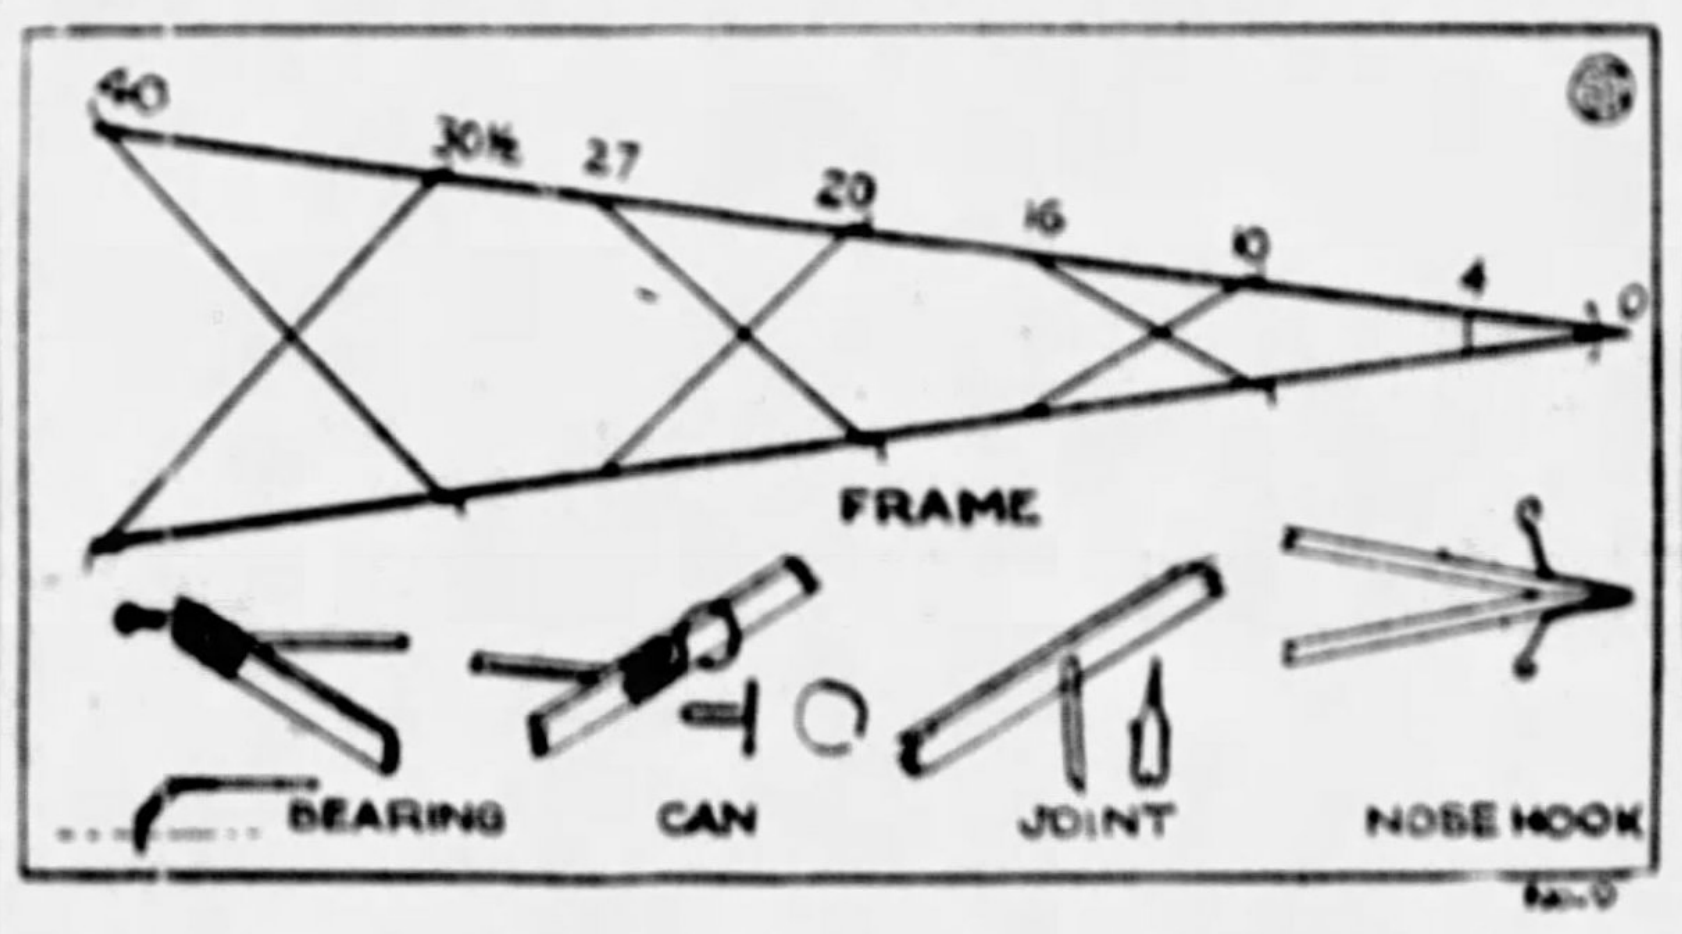
Building and Flying Model Airplanes

CONSTRUCTING FRAME OF S-S-2



IT IS essential that the frame of model airplane S-S-2 be true and strong. To accomplish this make a full size drawing of the plan view shown in the drawing, and use this to lay out the parts upon and mark their length and joints. The figures at the top indicate the number of inches each object is distant from the nose. If this method is not followed the resulting model will be very probably untrue, and not fit for flight. This model is made with a very slight margin of strength, so every feature must be exact to prevent failure. Having completed the full-size drawing, procure the following material:

2 strips balsa wood 5-16"x3-32" x40".

1 piece bamboo pole, at least 14 inches long.

2 nails, or light brads, No. 15-1, ¼" long.

2¾ inches No. 15 piano wire.

13¾ inches No. 10 piano wire.

Thread, Ambroid.

Sandpaper the long balsa strips smooth and slightly round their edges. Cut the end of each to a wedge as shown in the detail drawing, and fasten them together with Ambroid, Form No. 15 wire into a nose hook of the type shown. The included angle of the nose hook should pinch very slightly onto the nose of the frame, after which it is bound and Ambroided in place. From the bamboo split six lengths, and trim these to a section of 3-32 inch x 1-32 inch. Lay these over the full size drawing and cut them to the proper length of the braces, making the front brace from a scrap of the shorter X-braces. When all are cut to length, sharpen the ends of each brace to a chisel-like point, as shown in the detail drawing, and beginning at the nose, work backward, putting each brace in place by carefully pushing it into the middle of the longerons at the proper point, and Ambroiding it in place. When all are in place take up the frame and sight along its sides to determine if it be true and flat sided. If not make it so by further inserting or slightly withdrawing the braces. This is a ticklish job, but must be done right. When all is true, Ambroid any joints which seem loose, and bind and Ambroid the center crossing point of each X-brace.

Take the two nails and, by laying the heads on a piece of iron, and beating with a hammer, make a shovel-like end. In the center of this drill a hole with a No. 54 drill which is slightly smaller than one-sixteenth of an inch. Slightly flatten the shank, and bend it twice as shown in the detail drawing. File or cut the point off square, and bind each nail bearing to the open end of the frame as shown. Use Ambroid here. From the No. 10 wire cut six pieces, each 2¼ inches long, and form these into cans, or rubber loops, of the shape shown. Bind and Ambroid these in position. As seen one is placed in front of each X-brace. All of the open ends of the loops should be on one side of the frame.

When all joints are dry, trim off any projecting ends of braces which protrude through the sides, and give the frame a coat of banana oil which will strengthen it. If this application raises any roughness, sandpaper the frame lightly. When completed hang it up or lay it away carefully.

Tomorrow the power plant for this model will be described.

TWENTIETH CENTURY CLUB TO HEAR COUNT-AUTHOR

Outstanding among the many distinguished lecturers who will appear at the Twentieth Century Club this year is Count Hermann Keyserling, author of "The World in the Making" and "The Travel Diary of a Philosopher," who will speak Monday morning, January 16. His subject, which has been chosen by the program committee of the club, is "Where Are We Going?" and after Count Keyserling's custom, the lecture will be exclusively written for this occasion. This notable figure in the literary world is probably the most prominent lecturer coming to America this season. He will give only 30 lectures, each one exclusive and on a subject chosen by the group before whom he will appear. The visitor is a Russian who took refuge in Germany during the Revolution. His wife is a granddaughter of Bismarck.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

U.S. Senator from New York

THE COMMON COLD IS OFTEN YOUR OWN FAULT.

DR COPELAND

IN THE early autumn and during the changeable weather of late summer, there is a tendency to colds. You will say your particular infection came from wet feet, chilling of the body, or from contact with somebody who had a cold. It won't dawn on you that it is the result of some fault of your own.

As a matter of fact, a cold is one of the pretty reliable signs that you have sinned.

Now, don't be scared! I'm not going to preach you a long sermon about your soul and the importance of spiritual righteousness. Undoubtedly such a sermon would do you good, but it is not in my line.

But as I see it, not all sinning is against the Holy Spirit. There are sinners whose wrong-doing is against the body and indirectly against God, because the body is the temple of the Holy Spirit. However, we have not advanced far enough to gain universal recognition of this truth, although I have no personal doubt that that day will arrive.

When you have a cold you have abused yourself some way. Most likely you have overworked and night after night have found yourself overtired. Fatigue is responsible for lowered resistance and it prepares the way for almost any illness.

The digestive tract is made a plaything by many persons who are sensible about everything except their eating. Overeating, eating the wrong things, and neglect of the organs of elimination are in the background of many an illness. Repeated colds are among such ailments.

When the bowels fail to function it will not be long before there is absorption of body poisons which are capable of lowering vitality. A cold in the head or an attack of tonsilitis almost invariably is associated with constipation or intestinal fermentation.

Anything causing loss of sleep is sure to aid in the production of colds. Worry over business, social troubles, school, or anything else is one such factor.

To be too much indoors, neglecting sunshine, fresh air and exercise, may be paid for by a hard cold. You cannot overlook the simple things if you are to be well and vigorous. In any event you cannot escape the common cold if you disregard them.

It is just as important to avoid colds at this season as it is in winter. It is equally important to give proper treatment to the cold when you take it. By so doing you will avoid the real dangers of a neglected ailment.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES

A. B. D. Q.—What can be done for chronic catarrh of the intestines? Would this cause insanity? I have a terrible feeling in my head. Is this due to the intestinal trouble?

A.—Proper diet and general care should be helpful. If the trouble has extended over a period of time it will probably take time to clear it up. Headache is a frequent factor in all intestinal disorders. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

QUICKSANDS OF LOVE

A New Phase of "Revelations of a Wife"

By Adele Garrison

LILLIAN'S quick ear caught Mary's choking question, and she answered it before I could get words together, so astonished was I at the girl's agitation. But Lillian betrayed no slightest knowledge that she noticed anything in Mary's manner save a young girl's natural curiosity concerning a personable man.

"That, my dear," she said in a low tone, closing the door of her bedroom upon us as she spoke, "that is Noel Veritzen, only son of Philip Veritzen, who just now holds the high justice, the middle and the low, as far as you're concerned. Stunning looking chap, isn't he? I took pity on him yesterday when he dropped in to see me and told me how lonesome he was. I told him I had a sure cure for lonesomeness and invited him to dinner tonight. Do be nice to him, won't you, Mary?"

That she had thus rattled on purposely to give Mary a chance to recover herself, I was sure, even as I guessed that she was as much in the dark as I as to the reason for the young girl's agitation. Mary had herself well in hand, however, by the time Lillian had finished.

"I think I should have known he was Philip Veritzen's son if you hadn't told me," she said with an easy little laugh. "Honestly, for a second, I thought it was Mr. Veritzen himself, the shadow made his hair look gray, and I felt like turning round and running back home. My respected boss doesn't approve of frivolities for me, you know."

There was the little note of bitterness in her voice which I had noticed in any reference to Philip Veritzen since Jack Leslie had told her his side of the old feud between them. But there was something else, a hoarseness of voice which alarmed me as much as it annoyed me. Mary's voice is one of her charms, filled with liquid, lifting notes that fall restfully upon the ear. Woman-like, I had counted on it as one of the things which might attract Noel Veritzen to the girl, and help along Lillian's plan and mine to substitute in Mary's mind an interest in the young violinist for the attraction which we feared she felt for the wastrel, Jack Leslie.

"Yes, he does resemble his father," Lillian said, helping us off with our wraps. "But he has a much sweeter disposition, I'll tell this cross-eyed world."

We laughed, but I turned to Mary immediately afterward in alarm tinged with impatience.

"What has happened to your voice, Mary?" I asked.

"I don't know," she croaked. "I guess it's the dampness. Sometimes it affects me that way. When there's fog I've even been known to lose it altogether. But what a fright I am! Do you mind if I primp up a bit?"

Lillian and I smiled slyly at each other, with the kindly amusement which older women feel when they see a young girl preening herself in the consciousness that there is a young man in the offing.

"Help yourself," Lillian said, with a wave of her hand toward her dressing table.

Mary sat down on the narrow bench before the triple mirror and opening her vanity case drew from it powder and rouge compacts and lip-stick. Heroically I repressed a little exclamation of astonishment, for to my certain knowledge she had used neither rouge nor lip-salve since her sojourn in my home. She was so lovely as she was that I could have shaken her for the bizarre manner in which she made up her face and lips. For when she turned to us after she had finished, it was all I could do to repress an exclamation of dismay. The very contour of her features seemed changed, and while she was strikingly attractive, yet it was a far different type of beauty that she presented than the delicate loveliness which had been hers.

A Few Curtain Suggestions

THE sheerest of summer curtains to drape or "veil" windows, is a midsummer fad. The thinner the curtains the fuller they must be, and the wider the hems. In hanging, the rings of the pole may be discarded and the curtain may be swung from the plain pole by four or six braided cord loops. This mode of hanging is much more decorative and artistic than using the rings. The rings are also discarded where the curtain has a casing at the top wide enough to slip the pole through.

Net of different kinds is quite popular—fine or coarse mesh, white, deep cream, ecru or coffee colored, as the case may be. We find the nets are frequently dyed to match the other decorations in a room. This home dyeing is done out-of-doors so that the net may dry quickly in the open air and need not be wrung.

The white organdy curtains with colored borders may be very original in design if made at home. If the scroll border of the color is cut carefully and basted very evenly and firmly it can be stitched on the sewing machine without getting out of shape. The ties are generally made of the colored material and edged with the white organdy.

The so-called Dutch curtains are those that cover the top and bottom sash separately, the upper one falling a hem's width over the lower at the top of the lower sash. These curtains are very full with deep hems and slip into the pole with a casing at the top. If the lower curtain is fastened to the window sash it may be lifted and lowered with the window, though it is prettier to have them just on a rod that holds them over the casement at all times. These curtains are pretty made of fine sheer voile in soft cream white. Very fine cheese-cloth is also used and makes very attractive curtains. One novel way of finishing the curtains is to make the hems and the casings of colored voile simply stitched in place.

Frilly muslin curtains are pretty for bedroom use, one wide ruffle on the edge or three or five narrow ruffles set into the curtains two or three inches apart. The ruffles have narrow hems and are full enough to look dainty, but not full enough to stick out awkwardly. The ties, four inches wide, are frilled to match the curtains.

Irish Moss Blancmange.

Two cups milk, small ½ cup sugar, salt, ½ cup Irish moss soaked 20 minutes in cold water, vanilla. Put all in cold milk and boil 20 minutes in double boiler. Strain and mold. Serve with heavy cream.

"My dear, you have HONestly never seen ANYthing so positively perVERted as the way ARab acts with this poisonous FLIVver he has acQUIRED at this point! ACtually, he SIMply SLAYS me, because you would think it was a DOG or something HUman like that, the way he sort of tries to HUmor it and PAcify it into subMISsion, sort of, do you know what I mean? REally, my dear, I have grave FEARS at this point that all is not SOUND in his PERiscope, but I mean it is just what you might exPECT, because it is enough to drive ANYbody MAD to ride in that odd BUS and ARab practically does nothing ELSE nowadays but drive FRANtically all over the PLACE in it because he has the strange IDEA that it is a SPORT model, or something, and he looks SWANKy in it and all—can you BEAR it, my dear? Well, ANYways, I simply VOW I will never set FOOT in the darn thing aGAIN, because I mean I HONestly think there are HEAPS more atTRACtive ways to attempt SUIcide—I mean I ACtually DO!"

FOR THE LOVELORN .·. .·. .·. By ELEANOR GALE

Anxious.

Dear Miss Gale:

I am interested in a boy 18 years of age. My folks do not like him, because he used to drink, although he promised me that he would never drink any more. What shall I do? ANXIOUS.

If this boy has proved to you that he has the strength of mind to give up a vicious habit, then he isn't unworthy of your friendship. And it is up to you to he should be given a fair trial. convince your parents that, at the least,

Heavy-Hearted.

Dear Miss Gale:

I am a girl 16 years old and am in love with a boy of 17. I met him several months ago, but don't see him often now. He is a bit timid, I think, and I don't know whether he cares for me or not. Please tell me how to gain his friendship. HEAVY-HEARTED.

If this friend of yours is as timid as you say, then you'll have to take the aggressive. The next time you see him ask him to call. Then when he accepts, make his visit so pleasant that he will want to come again of his own accord.

Questionnaire.

Dear Miss Gale:

I am a constant reader of your column. I come now for some advice for myself. I live in Pittsburgh but am soon going to move to another city. I have a boy friend here and he asked me to give him my new address. I do not know it yet, so when I get to this city shall I write him a letter and tell my address. Thanking you in advance I am. QUESTIONNAIRE.

Yes, if this boy has asked you to do, it would be all right to write him a note after you arrive in the new city.

Broken-Hearted.

Dear Miss Gale:

I am a girl in my teens and am in love with a young man a few years my senior. Just recently he became angry at me and told me he was through with me. He really got mad over nothing. I called him up and wrote him a letter, but received no answer. We go to the same church, but I have not seen him there during the three weeks we have been angry with each other. What shall I do? BROKEN-HEARTED.

I think you have humbled yourself enough, my dear. In the first place, if the young man was angry with you over a mere trifle there was no need for you to ask his forgiveness. But once you did this he should have appreciated it and grasped at the opportunity to continue your friendship. For you to do anything else to further his interest in you would be humiliating and unbecoming to you. If he wants your friendship he will ask for it.

Anxious.

Dear Miss Gale:

I am engaged to a young man whom I love, and he says he loves me. He has been away from me for a few months and his letters of late are growing indifferent. I feel I cannot give him up. What would you advise me to do? ANXIOUS.

The surest way to lose your fiance is to show panic at his indifference. Ask him to come home for a visit. Perhaps a return to scenes that are dear to you both may counteract the effects of your long separation. If he should refuse to visit you, and if his letters do not grow any warmer, my best advice to you is to write him and ask him to release you from your promise to marry him. Even if you were able to induce him to marry you, marriage with a man who has ceased to care, would be a precarious undertaking.

Dorothy Dix Says:

MEMBERS OF THE FAMILY SHOULD BE TREATED SAME AS COMPANY.

IN ONE of Booth Tarkington's delightful stories he tells of a man who was most happily married, and who, in boasting of the good qualities of his wife, always wound up his panegyric by saying: "AND SHE HAS ALWAYS TREATED ME AS IF I WERE A PERFECT STRANGER."

By which the fortunate husband meant that his wife had shown to him the courtesy, the consideration, the reticence, the respect for his personal liberty that she would have shown to any chance-met individual. Also that she had made as definite an effort to be pleasant and agreeable to him as she would to a casual acquaintance.

Perhaps to most this little story will seem funny. To me it is full of heart-breaking pathos because it is such a tragic thing that we should treat those we love, and those whose happiness depends upon our attitude toward them, worse than we do the veriest strangers that cross our paths. Worse, even, than we do our enemies.

It is a strange paradox that the best we have and the best that is in us we give to those who care nothing for us and for whom we care nothing.

This is so universally the case that we have coined a phrase for it and speak of our "company dinners" and "company manners" and "company clothes," which we regard as too good for domestic consumption. Any old thing will do for those of our own household. They can't get away, and so there is no use in wasting any politeness or civility or charm upon them.

Yet this lack of good manners in the home circle is what makes marriage a failure oftener than anything else. For it is not the big sins that bring most couples into the divorce court. It is the little rudenesses, the picking of quarrels, the insults, brutal criticisms, the petty tyrannies that kill love and that make life together an unendurable misery.

It is pitiful to think that after five years of marriage all that the husband and wife ask of those to whom they are married is to be treated as well as they would treat an utter stranger! That would turn their homes from a purgatory into a paradise. That would change their marriages from bitter failures to glorious successes. That would make their dreams come true.

For how do we treat strangers? We make an effort to make ourselves attractive to them. The laziest and the most slovenly woman dolls herself up for strangers. She combs her hair in its most becoming way. She puts on her complexion and a pretty frock if she is going to meet some one she never saw before. If company is coming, the most untidy housekeeper goes on an orgy of cleaning, and the woman who feeds her family out of paper bags and tin cans gets up a good dinner.

Mighty few husbands would grow tired of their wives and wander away from their own firesides if they knew that they were going to find a home, when they returned of an evening, a woman who had on her company looks and her company clothes and that there would be a company dinner on the table.

And it would put pep into many a woman's housekeeping, and keep her from slumping into one of the disgruntled wives who ask, "What's the use of trying to please a husband who never notices how I look, or how much I save on the butcher's bill," if men would pay their wives the same compliments that they do to their hostesses when they are dining out, and tell her how charming she looks in that blue frock, and what a wonderful cook she is.

When we meet strangers we make an effort to entertain and amuse them. We don't sit up in sullen silence through a long evening. We don't inflict them with a detailed story of everything that has gone wrong with us during the day. We don't wet-blanket every proposal they make for some amusement.

On the contrary, we bring out our little budget of stories and our best jokes. We relate any little amusing incident that has happened to us and any news we have heard, and we feign an interest, even if we do not have a real one, in what our new acquaintance is telling us and listen politely while he gives his views on the future of aeronautics, or relates how many miles he made a day on his last auto trip.

If these tactics were introduced into the home circle it would change the whole domestic atmosphere. No longer would husbands and wives sit up of an evening in a silence so thick you could cut it with a knife. For the very husbands who never say a word at home are the ones who set the table in a roar abroad. And the peevish, fretful wives whose husbands grab their hats as soon as they have swallowed their dinners and beat it to keep from having to listen to their complaints, are the very ladies who charm every stranger with their sweetness and graciousness.

If husbands and wives would use on each other a little of the line that they use on strangers, there wouldn't be so many married people out on a still hunt for soulmates who don't bore them.

We don't argue with strangers when we don't happen to agree with their views. We consider the man and woman lacking in savoir faire who get into quarrels with casual acquaintances over politics and religion or the best make of automobile, or how short women's skirts should be. Privately, we may think those who differ with us ignorant and silly, or lacking in taste, but we don't feel called upon to tell them so, or go to the mat with them. We simply change the subject, and keep our own opinion and let them keep theirs undisturbed.

If we treated our husbands and wives that way, it would eliminate the family spat that keeps everybody's nerves raw, and that makes the average home like living over a volcano that may explode at any moment. Why should husbands and wives quarrel over everything over which they disagree, from politics to pie? Why should they argue over topics on which they know they differ? Why shouldn't they concede each other the right to an individual opinion if they are willing to concede the same right to a perfect stranger?

Finally, we do not feel called upon to tell a stranger home truths. We do not tell a strange woman that she is getting fat, or that her hat is too young for her. We do not tell tell a strange man that we have heard his story before, or that his table manners are atrocious.

But we ruthlessly wound our own husbands and wives with criticisms that cut to the quick, and then we wonder that they seek elsewhere the flattery and admiration without which they cannot live.

Perhaps there would be no more unfaithful husbands and wives if the women and men to whom they were married treated them as if they were strangers.

Local Market Quiet Changes Narrow

Trading interest lagged during the abbreviated session on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today. A few scattered sales of miscellaneous issues marked the early dealings and price fluctuations were very narrow. Demand for Lone Star Gas seemed to have dried up temporarily and bids for the stock were somewhat under the price level prevailing on the close Friday. Actual sales at the start of the market were at 47 to 46½, comparing with yesterday's close at 47. Arkansas Gas was firm at 9¼, but only a few shares changed hands.

Pittsburgh Screw and Bolt remained quiet and practically unchanged. The news is out as far as earnings of this issue are concerned, but there remains the trading stimulant of a probable raise in the dividend rate. Peoples Savings and Trust changed hands again at 320, the level attained on its 20-point rise yesterday. An odd lot of Duquesne Light came on the market at 116½, unchanged from the last preceding sale.

WHOLESALE PRODUCE

Demand was fairly active in the local wholesale produce district today. Vegetables held steady generally. Potatoes were again in light supply and prime grade new West Virginia and New Jersey varieties gained 25 cents per 150-pound sack. Peaches, which had been high, lost for the second day in succession. Apples sold considerably lower. Wider ranges of price were offered on honeydews and California cantaloupes.

Poultry was in active demand. Although in good supply, the market closed firm.

There was little change among dairy products. The butter and egg markets were firm with cheese holding steady.

Car lot supplies continued light, 412 cars being on track. Arrivals included 1 car of apples, 10 cabbage, 6 cantaloupes, 3 lemons, 1 lettuce, 7 oranges, 14 peaches, 2 pears, 7 potatoes, 4 sweet potatoes, 5 watermelons, 1 berries, 1 peas, 3 cucumbers, 15 tomatoes and 2 green corn.

Hay receipts were light, four cars having arrived in the yards. Hay and grain closed firm at unchanged quotations.

Work Through Night.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—(AP.)—Night work was the rule in all leading brokerage offices last night as a result of the sensational break in the market. Restaurants in the financial district were thronged with workers and in many cases meals were served in offices. So great was the volume of business that clerks were kept on duty until the early hours of the morning sending out margin calls, posting books, mailing notices of sales and purchases and arranging for an adjustment of loans.

Liggett July Sale.

The 448 stores of the Louis K. Liggett Company during July had a sales total of $4,783,657, an increase of 8.83 per cent, or $389,224 more than in July, 1926. Sales for the first seven months were $33,782,657, an increase of 14.27 per cent over the $29,106,123 sales total for the corresponding period of last year.

Chevrolet Tops 1926.

Production of the Chevrolet Motor Company for this year until yesterday was 732,147 units, an output greater than that of the full year of 1926, with plants now operating on a schedule of 3,500 units daily.

STRONG BUYING SENDS MANY ISSUES UP

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—(AP.)—Stock prices displayed a firm undertone at the opening of today's market in reflection of the strong buying support provided overnight as a result of yesterday's disastrous break.

Baldwin, Houston Oil and Commercial Solvents "B" each opened 3 points higher, and United States Steel common, American Can, Hudson Motors and Consolidated Gas were among the score or so issues to show initial gains of a point or more.

Early trading appeared to be of an orderly character.

The demands for more margin apparently had been well met, as there was little evidence of forced liquidation. A few soft spots developed among the foods and specialties, but they failed to halt the general upward trend. Market comment generally agreed that there was nothing in the business situation to account for the reaction, which was described as a necessary correction of a top-heavy speculative position.

Commercial Solvents B increased its gains to 9 points before the end of the first half hour, and A. M. Byers, International Harvester and Woolworth moved up 2 points or more.

Foreign exchanges opened steady, with demand sterling around $4.85 11-16 and French francs around 3.91⅝ cents.

Cotton broke $1.50 a bale in the early trading.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—The cotton market opened easy at a decline of 28 to 38 points under active selling promoted by easier Liverpool cables and weather reports more favorable than had been expected. Week-end liquidation again was in evidence, but there was considerable covering. After easing off to 19.10c for December, the market rallied 15 or 20 points from the lowest.

The improvement was not fully maintained, but trading was quieter and prices fairly steady at the end of the first half hour. Private cables reported general liquidation and hedge selling in Liverpool. The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 52,000 bales, against 39,000 last year.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 13.—Cotton spot dull, prices barely steady. American strict good middling, 11.15d; good middling, 10.80; strict middling, 10.45d; middling, 10.15d; strict low middling, 9.75d; low middling, 9.40d; strict good ordinary, 9.05d; good ordinary, 8.60d. Sales 3,000 bales, including 2,000 American. Receipts 12,000 bales; American 4,300. Futures closed barely steady. October, 10.10d; December, 10.15d; January, 10.22d; March, 10.26d; May, 10.31d.

MEET SALLY JEROME HERE NEXT MONDAY

HARD WORK AND FUN -:- SMILES AND TEARS -:- IN "SALLY'S SHOULDERS"

ON TIME?

Yes, Sally's on time if street car is, but she smiles whenever she can because today's Saturday—"house-cleaning" day.

THE PATTERN

"Beau" and Mabel are off to the beach this morning. Sally's near the water, too, but she's bringing out the pattern in the kitchen linoleum. Monotonous? Yes, but it's broken. Read "Sally's Shoulders," starting Monday in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, as Beatrice Burton's latest serial novel.

MUST EAT!

But Sally has to prepare it herself. If diversion is something different from daily routine, then Sally's diversion from punching a typewriter is setting the table. Some day, she wants to use paper plates . . they don't have to be washed!

WHAT STATION?

Music goes to Sally's feet—not her head. "Sally's Shoulders," her own dance, makes dishwashing hazardous for the dishes but easier for Sally. But Beatrice Burton tells the whole story, beginning Monday afternoon as a serial in The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

KING VISITS GARDNER

"WELL! BACK AGAIN"

William L. King, director of the Citizens' League, calls on District Attorney Samuel R. Gardner and confers informally with him for 30 minutes. It's understood they reviewed the league prosecutions now pending and that no other matters were discussed.

Young Plane Builders Developing Models

The boys of Western Pennsylvania, many of them, perhaps, future aviators or airplane designers, promise to give the National Aircraft Model contest officials something to think about.

Telephone calls to the effect that planes are being trimmed up, adjusted, their powers tried, indicate that a number of ingenious airplane models will be entered in the contest being conducted by The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and the Bureau of Recreation.

The reports on the planes will go to Orville Wright, pioneer in airplane building, and Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, America's ace. Wright is chairman of the national committee, "Lindy" is associate chairman. Other noted men on the list will select the reports and decide 50 of the cleverest boy-builders in the United States. Whether 10 or none from Western Pennsylvania are chosen by them to report to Memphis, Tenn., depends on the boys.

But there's plenty of chance. If your entry isn't in, find the blank in the fiction section and send it to the aircraft editor, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. And tell your friends.

FLOOD CONTROL PLANS TOLD

By Universal Service.

RAPID CITY, S. D., Aug. 13.—Following a series of conferences with President Coolidge at the summer White House, Congressman William E. Hull of Illinois, presented a program for Mississippi flood control in a speech before the local Rotary Club. Deepening of the river channel, creation of storage reservoirs, construction of new spillways and of higher, wider and stronger levees were proposed. He said that government engineers, supported by the ablest civil engineers and business men in the country, should assemble at once in Washington to agree upon a program for submission to Congress.

Anson Makes Last Attempt To Rewin Betty and She And Bob Are United

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Betty Warren and Bob Stevenson fall in love. Bob is a mechanic. Betty earns most of the living for her family. Her father is dead; her mother, impractical. Betty has three sisters, Helen and Gladys and Virginia with a son Junior and a husband, Jim, who was gassed in the war. Betty accepts invitations from Anson Lorrimer, a wealthy author, and Bob is jealous. She meets Harry Martin and introduces him to Gladys. They become engaged. Lorrimer entices Betty and she is rescued just in time by Harry. She and Bob make up. Helen breaks into the movies. Lorrimer gives her a part in his picture and so renews his friendship with Betty. Peter Lessaways becomes honorably interested in Helen. Lorna May, an old flame of Lorrimer, jealous of Betty, plants a necklace in Betty's handbag, where it is found. Helen says she saw Lorna do the trick, Lessways backs her up. Betty is vindicated. Lessways tells Helen when she is old enough he will marry her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

HELEN went back to her play-acting and was able to avoid Lorna because Lorna so successfully avoided her.

Lessways had been as good as his word. He had seen Martin and Bob and had investigated the matter of the automobile polish. The small company was launched with plans for Bob to be president on a salary and royalty basis, for Harry to be general manager and the head of the sales-promotion end and for Lessways himself to be somewhere in the background. Jim Hutchins came home. He was on the road to complete recovery and a place was to be made for him in the new company.

Harry and Gladys' wedding shortly after Thanksgiving was simple but very pretty. Bob was best man and Peter a self-constituted usher. There was quite an array of presents with Peter's an order for "flat furnishings."

"Weddings," remarked Lessways to Helen during the course of activities, "are great matchmakers."

He looked toward Bob and Betty who were talking together in a corner and sighed with mock sentimentality.

"Pooh!" replied Helen rudely, "that match was made long before this wedding . . . in heaven, I suppose."

"So are some others," commented Lessways dreamily. Helen sped away, blushing, and he returned to his ice cream, contented.

So Harry and Gladys went South, the company was launched and Virginia found a very little place to call her own again.

And Helen went into a new picture. She had a better part and a bigger one; she was making good. When Lorrimer's picture was re-

Davis Wants Coal King

COOLIDGE TOLD MINING IS OVERDONE

By Universal Service.

RAPID CITY, S. D., Aug. 13.—Wanted, a coal king.

"Not until the soft coal industry develops a leader who can effect a substantial consolidation of the mining properties can there be permanent peace or permanent employment in the trade," Secretary of Labor James J. Davis declared to President Coolidge.

"Over-production and over-development are the twin evils of the industry. In Indiana there are 1,000 mines, yet 54 could produce all the coal needed for that area. The men can get only three days' work a week when they do work."

Davis said there are no signs of settlement of the prolonged soft coal strike. Yet, the public is not suffering, he said. He said there are 50,000,000 tons of surplus coal left yet and that the nonunion mines can produce enough to satisfy the needs of the country.

Davis reported problems of alien criminal deportation and alien bootlegging to the President. "Our survey showed that there are 100,000 criminal aliens subject to deportation," he said, "but governors and other state officials are employing their parole power to the fullest extent, with the result that it is a delicate legal question whether those alien criminals thus become wards of the state and are thereby removed from our power of deportation. As a means of overcoming the aliens who come in as seamen, get jobs and stay here, we are appealing to employers to employ only aliens who are eligible to citizenship."

BOOTLEGGERS' JAIL PARADISE UNDER PROBE

BALTIMORE, Aug. 13.—(AP)—The United States Department of Justice will investigate the management of all Maryland jails in which convicted bootleggers are quartered, Amos W. W. Woodcock, Federal district attorney, declared after a conference in Washington with W. T. Hammock, acting superintendent of Federal prisons.

Mr. Woodcock requested the investigation after disclosures that convicted bootleggers at the Denton, Md., jail were permitted to fish, play cards and lounge about in the shade of trees. Such "bootleggers' paradise" must go, the attorney said, and bootleggers must serve their sentences as other prisoners. Wardens and sheriffs, found guilty of allowing Federal prisoners too much liberty, he said, are subject to contempt of court charges.

Sheriff William F. Jackson at Denton said the situation at his jail was known to a Federal prison inspector. The jail has no walls, he says, and located off the bank of a river, the prisoners could fish without leaving the premises, or play cards on the lawn. He said they were always under guard.

HAVEY BOYLE

IN New York, Jack Delaney was awarded the decision on a foul in his bout with Paulino [illegible] game. In Milwaukee, [illegible] same day, Joe Dundee, [illegible]weight champion of the world, and his alleged opponent, Pinky Mitchell, were tossed out of a ring for stalling; [illegible] Buffalo on the same day Cuddy De Marco, Pittsburgh boxer, went payless after he had been accused of fouling Jimmy [illegible]. Not so good, all this for boxing.

YET the public is tolerant on the whole toward boxers and their affairs. There was no particular clamor over any one of these affairs, and newspapers in telling of these unsatisfactory bouts were only mildly excited. The average boxing fan has come to expect events of this kind.

THE boxing fan does not take his sport quite so seriously as does the baseball fan. Note the clamor over the fining of one ball player, Cuyler. Here the excitement was greater, of course, because Cuyler is a local player, but the story was big enough at that to cause considerable attention in other baseball centers.

JOHN McGARVEY'S resignation as matchmaker at Motor Square Garden is to be regretted. His record was flawless in a very important particular. He insisted from first to last that the boxers he signed go into the ring with honest intentions. He leaves the game here better for his having engaged in it.

PITTSBURGH enjoys a good reputation among the boxing men of the country. Some of the wild stories you hear about this and that being "in" never were circulated about Pittsburgh bouts under McGarvey's regime. In one bout there was talk about it "being in the bag," but the wise boys got a pretty good stinging in that affair. The simple fact was that the wise boys just thought they knew something. What happened was altogether different from their calculations. The boys admitted this a year or so after the bout in question was history.

TO SAY that every bout McGarvey put on rang the bell would be foolish for it was beyond his power to make a perfect score, but he did try at all times to give the customers the best he could provide. Many [illegible]

IN a story by Jack Johnson, the former heavyweight king admits that he faked his defeat at the hands of Jess Willard in Havana. Here is how Johnson worked out the details of his "laying down" to Willard:

"I did not tell Mrs. Johnson that I was going to lose the fight until a few moments before I entered the ring. [illegible] had paid my fight percentage before I left my home. No one knew that he was there and I employed four policemen to guard the home, though they did not know that it was because of the money and with the understanding that they merely were to watch the premises."

JOHNSON continues: "I instructed Mrs. Johnson to sit at the ringside and watch the fight, that there was more money due me and until this money was paid to me I would not let the fight take the course agreed upon. Delay in paying the money was due to the incomplete account of the receipts, which was under way when the fight started. Mrs. Johnson was to signal me when she had received the additional money and I was to signal her so that she might leave the ringside."

THE fight, according to Jack, "was originally intended to end in the tenth round, but when that round arrived the money had not been paid. It was nearing the twenty-sixth round when the money was turned over to Mrs. Johnson. I had specified that it should be in $500 bills in order that the package should be small and the amount quickly counted. After examining it she gave me the signal that everything was o. k., by a prearranged sign, and she departed.

"IN the twenty-sixth round I let the fight end as it did. I felt very sorry to have to relinquish the belt, but I was not sorry that I had lost the championship or rather permitted another to attain it. On the contrary I was happy because I hopefully looked forward to my speedy return to the United States where I would be with my old friends, and, above all, with my mother."

BAUR, REHR IN FINAL OF OIL CITY NET EVENT

OIL CITY, Aug. 13.—(AP.)—Byron Baur, Erie, defending titleholder, and Wilmer Rehr, Warren, O., meet today in the championship singles finals of the twentieth annual tournament of the Northwestern Pennsylvania Tennis Association being held here. Baur went to the final when he defeated Smith, Erie, 6-3, 6-1, 5-7, 6-1. Rehr gained the right to meet Baur when he defeated Weidler, of Warren, 2-6, 6-4, 6-3 and 7-5.

PIRATES

Holm was passed purposely. This made possible a double play with Manager O'Farrell at bat, although the infielders played close enough to nail Bottomley at the plate. Hill [illegible] O'Farrell so much that he [illegible] the ball. Carmen reached it in time for a play on Holm who was nailed at the barrier by a scant margin. The danger, however, was not passed. Lester Bell is a mean guest at the plate in such a crisis, for it surely was a jam with the winning run on second and a single needed for victory. As Haines was the next batter, Hill and Smith worked on Bell until the count was three and two. The next ball was low and the bases were filled. Hill then proceeded to fan Haines and the fight went into extra rounds.

Paul Waner almost put the Pirates in front in the first of the eleventh. With Grantham on first and two out, Paul started one into the right center pocket that would have reached the fence had Taylor Douthit not been so active. Douthit nailed the ball as he almost ran into the barricade. Had Paul pulled this ball toward right it would have ridden into the stands for a two-run homer. But, unfortunately, it was too far up toward the open field. Bottomley's winning smack raised the Cardinals into a deadlock with the Pirates. To stay as good as a tie for the runnerup position, the Pirates will have to win one of the two remaining games.

BUC LINEUP CHANGED.

A muff of Pooch Barnhart's liner by Taylor Douthit gave the Pirates their only run. The tally was made in the sixth. With one out, Sprout Waner singled but Grantham fanned. Brother Paul whipped a single to right, sending Sprout to third. Barnhart's hot liner was muffed by Douthit and Sprout tallied.

Besides putting Smith into action, Manager Bush switched his lineup a bit. Barnhart was moved to the cleanup notch, Wright dropped to sixth and Traynor batted fifth.

Mountaineers Benefit Most

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Aug. 13.—For the first time, West Virginia athletic authorities have entered into a non-scouting agreement with a gridiron opponent. Last fall when the great Missouri team made its appearance at Morgantown, Coaches Rodgers and Henry and Directors Stansbury and Brewer discussed the non-scouting idea, and all were inclined toward its adoption.

With the approach of the coming season a final agreement, eminently fair and satisfactory, was reached. According to the compact neither Missouri nor West Virginia will scout each other officially or take advantage of any information received from any unofficial source.

The effect of the non-scouting pact on the game at Columbia next November will be watched with great interest by West Virginia athletic authorities and by Mountaineer fans. West Virginia may have "the edge" if there is any, since Coach Rodgers is planning to inaugurate an entirely new system of offense, while it is probable that Coach Gwinn Henry will stick to the style that was so effective last fall. On the other hand, Missouri is accustomed to playing teams which have not been scouted, as this is one of the rules of the Missouri Valley Conference.

The offensive play of the Mountaineer and the Tiger should be more spectacular than ever against each other since neither will have any idea of the "pet" plays of the other.

The successful operation of the non-scouting agreement with Missouri may lead to similar arrangements with other elevens which the Mountaineers face annually, although no steps have been taken in this direction.

events showed that the star outfielder was not in the best graces of the club officials. As a result he was reported on the market on numerous occasions.

Earl Smith, catcher, and Johnny Morrison, suspended righthander, have been with the Corsairs for several years.

Vance, admitted to be one of the best righthanders in the major leagues, has starred for Brooklyn during the last five years. Statz, sent back to the Coast league by the Chicago Cubs, was obtained by the Dodgers and has been playing fine ball for the Robins in centerfield. What he lacks in hitting ability he makes up in fielding, being one of the fastest outfielders in the National League.

Henline started his major league career with the Giants, and was sent to the Phillies, with whom he ranked as one of the most dependable receivers in the majors.

DREYFUSS SCOFFS

"There is absolutely no truth in the story," said President Barney Dreyfuss, of the Pittsburgh club, when asked about the authenticity of the rumor.

"The report is ridiculous on its face, as in such a deal the Pittsburgh club would be giving up three men for one. Vance is the only man in the Brooklyn trio named who would be of any service to us. We have no use for the two others mentioned.

"The statement that the deal was shaped or talked about during the Robins' last visit to Pittsburgh also is erroneous. As a matter of fact, for the first time in many years during a visit to this city Manager Robinson, of the Brooklyn club, failed to come near our offices.

"But it's all bunk. Everyone knows that no trades can be made at this time, and even when winter comes and deals are possible you may depend upon it that we are not going to make trades for a lot of broken-down ball players on other clubs. We don't want their played-out material. We are going to develop our own players from young material."

referee's decision, even if the latter is given on a foul.

That a world's championship can be won or lost in such a manner is attested by the fact that it has actually happened.

When Ad Wolgast and Willie Ritchie met in Daly City, Cal., on November 28, 1912, for the world's lightweight honors, Wolgast was the champion and Ritchie the challenger. Ritchie won on a foul in the twelfth round, and became champion of the world, being recognized everywhere as such until the late Freddie Welsh took the honors from him on a point decision in London on July 7, 1914.

TOMMY ARMOUR, United States and Canadian National Open Champion, has Signed to Write Exclusively for the Sun-Telegraph.

Born in Scotland Tommy Armour has spent his entire life in an atmosphere of golf. He knows his game thoroughly, and loves it. More than that he plays with a dashing finesse that has made him one of the most popular and appealing figures on the links.

Tommy Armour's story reads like a novel. Serving through four years of the World War he was wounded with shrapnel, losing an eye and suffering partial paralysis of the right arm.

Most men would have given up golf as hopeless. But disability only served to spur Armour on. Like some swashbuckling figure from mediaeval history he laughed at disability and continued to set a dizzy pace that carried him to the heights.

Now, as open champion, which title he won recently at Oakmont, he rules the golfing roost—wearing the most sought after crown that American golf has to bestow.

In his articles in the Sun-Telegraph, Armour will tell his readers about the game. He will tell not alone how he plays, but he also will TELL HOW YOU CAN PLAY AND IMPROVE YOUR GAME. Armour isn't content to tell the story of his own meteoric rise. His idea is to make golf an open book for the amateur and the dub.

You'll like this series—and YOU'LL LEARN A LOT ABOUT GOLF FROM READING THEM.

SPORTS COMMENT

By James J. Long

KIKI CUYLER is drawing nearer and nearer to his doom as a Pirate. From a world series hero in 1925 the Flint flyer has dropped so far in the estimation of the Buccaneer bosses that their only thought about him now appears to center chiefly around the proposition of finding the quickest way to get rid of him.

The latest step in the case, according to information received from a source that cannot be doubted, is that efforts are now being made by the Corsair management to bring Outfielder Adam Comorosky back to the Bucs from the Wichita (Kan.) club in the Western League.

And it does not require such extraordinary powers of perception or deduction as those of the proverbial Philadelphia lawyer to figure out that the coming of Comorosky will mean the passing of Cuyler.

WHEN Comorosky was sent to the Wichita club under option last spring the understanding was that he could be recalled by Pittsburgh any time in August or September provided Wichita no longer had any chance for the Western League pennant.

As Wichita is now seven games behind the leaders it is considered practically out of the running, and the Pittsburgh club officials are trying to induce President Art Griggs to transfer Comorosky back to the Freebooters.

As soon as Comorosky can be brought East to join the Bucs on their present trip, Cuyler will be sent home, and after that—well, probably "it won't be long."

There is even a possibility that Cuyler will not be kept with the team on the road until Comorosky reports. The management is determined notto use him in a game if it can avoid doing so, and may ship him back to Pittsburgh at any time.

THE hardest test to which the Chicago Nationals have yet been subjected as pennant possibilities is now being faced in the prospect that they will be deprived of the services of Catcher Gabby Hartnett for a period of about 10 days as the result of a spiked foot which Hartnett suffered the other day in making a play on Gus Felix of Brooklyn.

With all due respect to what Charley Root and Hack Wilson have done for the Cubs, there is no getting away from the fact that Hartnett has been one of the greatest of all factors in lifting them to first place in the pennant race and keeping them there. He goes through a lot of action on the field that may look like waste motion or county fair stuff, but he's a great catcher, for all that, and in addition to his efficiency in handling the pitchers, throwing to bases and other backstopping departments he carries a wallop in his bat that has turned the tide in favor of the Bruins in a number of games.

RETAINING their present margin of leadership while lacking the services of Hartnett will be a tough contract for the Bears, and if they can get away with it they will be furnishing the strongest evidence they have yet produced that they are of a real championship caliber and not merely front runners.

HARTNETT'S injury, by the way, marks one of the few times this season that the Cubs have lost the services of a valuable player. With Pittsburgh heading the list, other pennant-contending clubs in both major leagues have been hit hard by illness or injury, but the Cubs have fared very luckily and have received many more smiles than frowns from Dame Fortune.

With the exception of two short off-spells for Outfielder Wilson and a longer lay-off by Pitcher Percy Jones, the Bruins have escaped accidents throughout the season, and from an unbiased viewpoint this good fortune has had more to do with putting Chicago at the head of the pennant procession than any superiority on the part of the Cubs over other teams in the race.

CHARGES of fouling have become so fashionable in connection with big ring battles in the East that a bout can hardly be said to have complied with all the regulations nowadays unless it is followed by a controversy as to whether a certain punch at some stage of the proceedings was above or below the belt line.

The awarding of a victory to Jack Delaney over Paulino Uzcudun on a foul in New York Thursday night, following the prolonged debate as to whether or not Jack Dempsey socked Jack Sharkey in prohibited territory before knocking him out in their recent meeting, has started the fans buzzing again on the subject of foul blows.

A READER who is a party to a controversy writes to inquire if a fight were a championship affair and the titleholder were disqualified on a foul and the decision given to his adversary, the crown would pass to the man who won in that fashion.

It certainly would. Not only the decision in the fight but everything else that is at stake goes with the

FOOTWORK IS GOLF'S FOUNDATION—ARMOUR

TURNS GOLF SCRIBE

TOMMY ARMOUR

POSITION MAKES OR SPOILS GAME

By TOMMY ARMOUR,
U. S. and Canadian Open Golf Champion.

AS strange as it may sound, very few amateur players know anything about the high art of golf. The fact that you can shoot your course in par or under doesn't necessarily mean that you know golf. The most important thing for any golfer to achieve is the complete comprehension of what he is trying to do. The mere telling him of how to hold his club, take his stance, etc., doesn't tell him why these things bring results.

Remember this: Above all, footwork is the most important factor in the game. The mastery of the use of your feet, the transference of your weight at the right time and the correct knee and hip movements will help you more than all the theoretical ways of "how to swing your club." Here is the reason: If the feet are in the proper position during the execution of the shot, you will swing your club to a nearer degree correctly than if you merely concentrated on the position of your hand or elbow.

EMPLOY FOOT METHODS

Practically all of the fine golfers have mastered the art of footwork. And they all employ the same methods. A series of pictures of a dozen leading players show the feet, knees and hips all employed in the same way. It is a matter of fine balance.

The first movement that the great players master at the start of a drive is to move the left knee and left hip toward the ball, thereby throwing the right hip back from the ball, which allows the player to be in a position to swing the club back properly. On the stroke the movement is reversed, easily and gracefully, the right hip coming forward in its original position, getting the player in the position where he can hit the ball best. This applies right through the game, but the nearer you come to the pin the less the movement is of your hips and knees, all of them merely being abbreviations of the first movement with the driver.

CONCENTRATE ON SWING

The amateur golfer should concentrate on this point: On the downward swing make your club travel inside of the line of flight. This is possible only by the free use of the feet.

In the series of articles I purpose to write I will endeavor to show you that if your footwork and hipwork are correct it will be very difficult to get yourself out of position to hit the ball.

If you need to be impressed on the importance of footwork, watch the final day's playing in a big, important tournament. Invariably those leaders who fail by the side can blame their ending on the quick swing, with no pivoting. Very often anxiousness causes that, and very often weariness. The leg muscles become knotted and tired and the free use of them which was in evidence during the first day's play is gone.

Ninety-nine out of 100 average amateur golfers hardly use the feet at all. They lack the confidence to turn the body, and through that emanates 80 per cent of their major faults.

ROSS, Y. M. C. A. SWIM STAR, QUITS AMATEURS

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—(AP.)—The New York World says that Clarence Ross, long-distance swimming star of the New York Athletic Club, has quit the amateur ranks, turned in his membership card in the A. A. U., and will enter the 21-mile marathon race at Toronto, August 31, prizes in which aggregate $60,000.

Never-Say-Die Jimmy Dime

By HARRY KECK, Sports Editor.

I AM INDEBTED to my good friend Ed Fritz, New Castle sports scribe, for some information about Jimmy Dime, veteran manager of boxers, who once was a big fistic figure around Pittsburgh. Jimmy has been more or less in seclusion for several years, and frequently I have been asked:

"What has become of Jimmy Dime?"

I am happy to report, with the aid of the information from Fritz, that Jimmy still is very much alive and showing steady improvement following a serious accident three or four years ago. He was run down by an automobile in New Castle and suffered a fractured hip. He was badly incapacitated for his life work of traveling about the country with his boxers, and it was thought for a time he never would be able to resume his old position. The last time I met Jimmy was at Gene Tunney's training camp at Stroudsburg, Pa., last fall. He was hobbling about on crutches. I rode with him in his car to Philadelphia, along with Mrs. Dime and Paris Cangy, Jimmy's lightweight boxer. From Philly, Jimmy continued on to Atlantic City to see Jack Dempsey train.

Doctors had been unable to give Dime much hope at that time, but he continued optimistic despite his physical handicap. Besides his broken hip, his hearing was affected, and he was not much like the Jimmy Dime of old, the Jimmy who had piloted George Chip, the Madison (Pa.) coal miner, to the middleweight championship, and also had handled George's brother, Joe Chip, the only man who ever knocked out the late Harry Greb; Tom McMahon, the heavyweight Bearcat; Patsy Brannigan, Tony Ross and big Dan Daily, the white hope, among others.

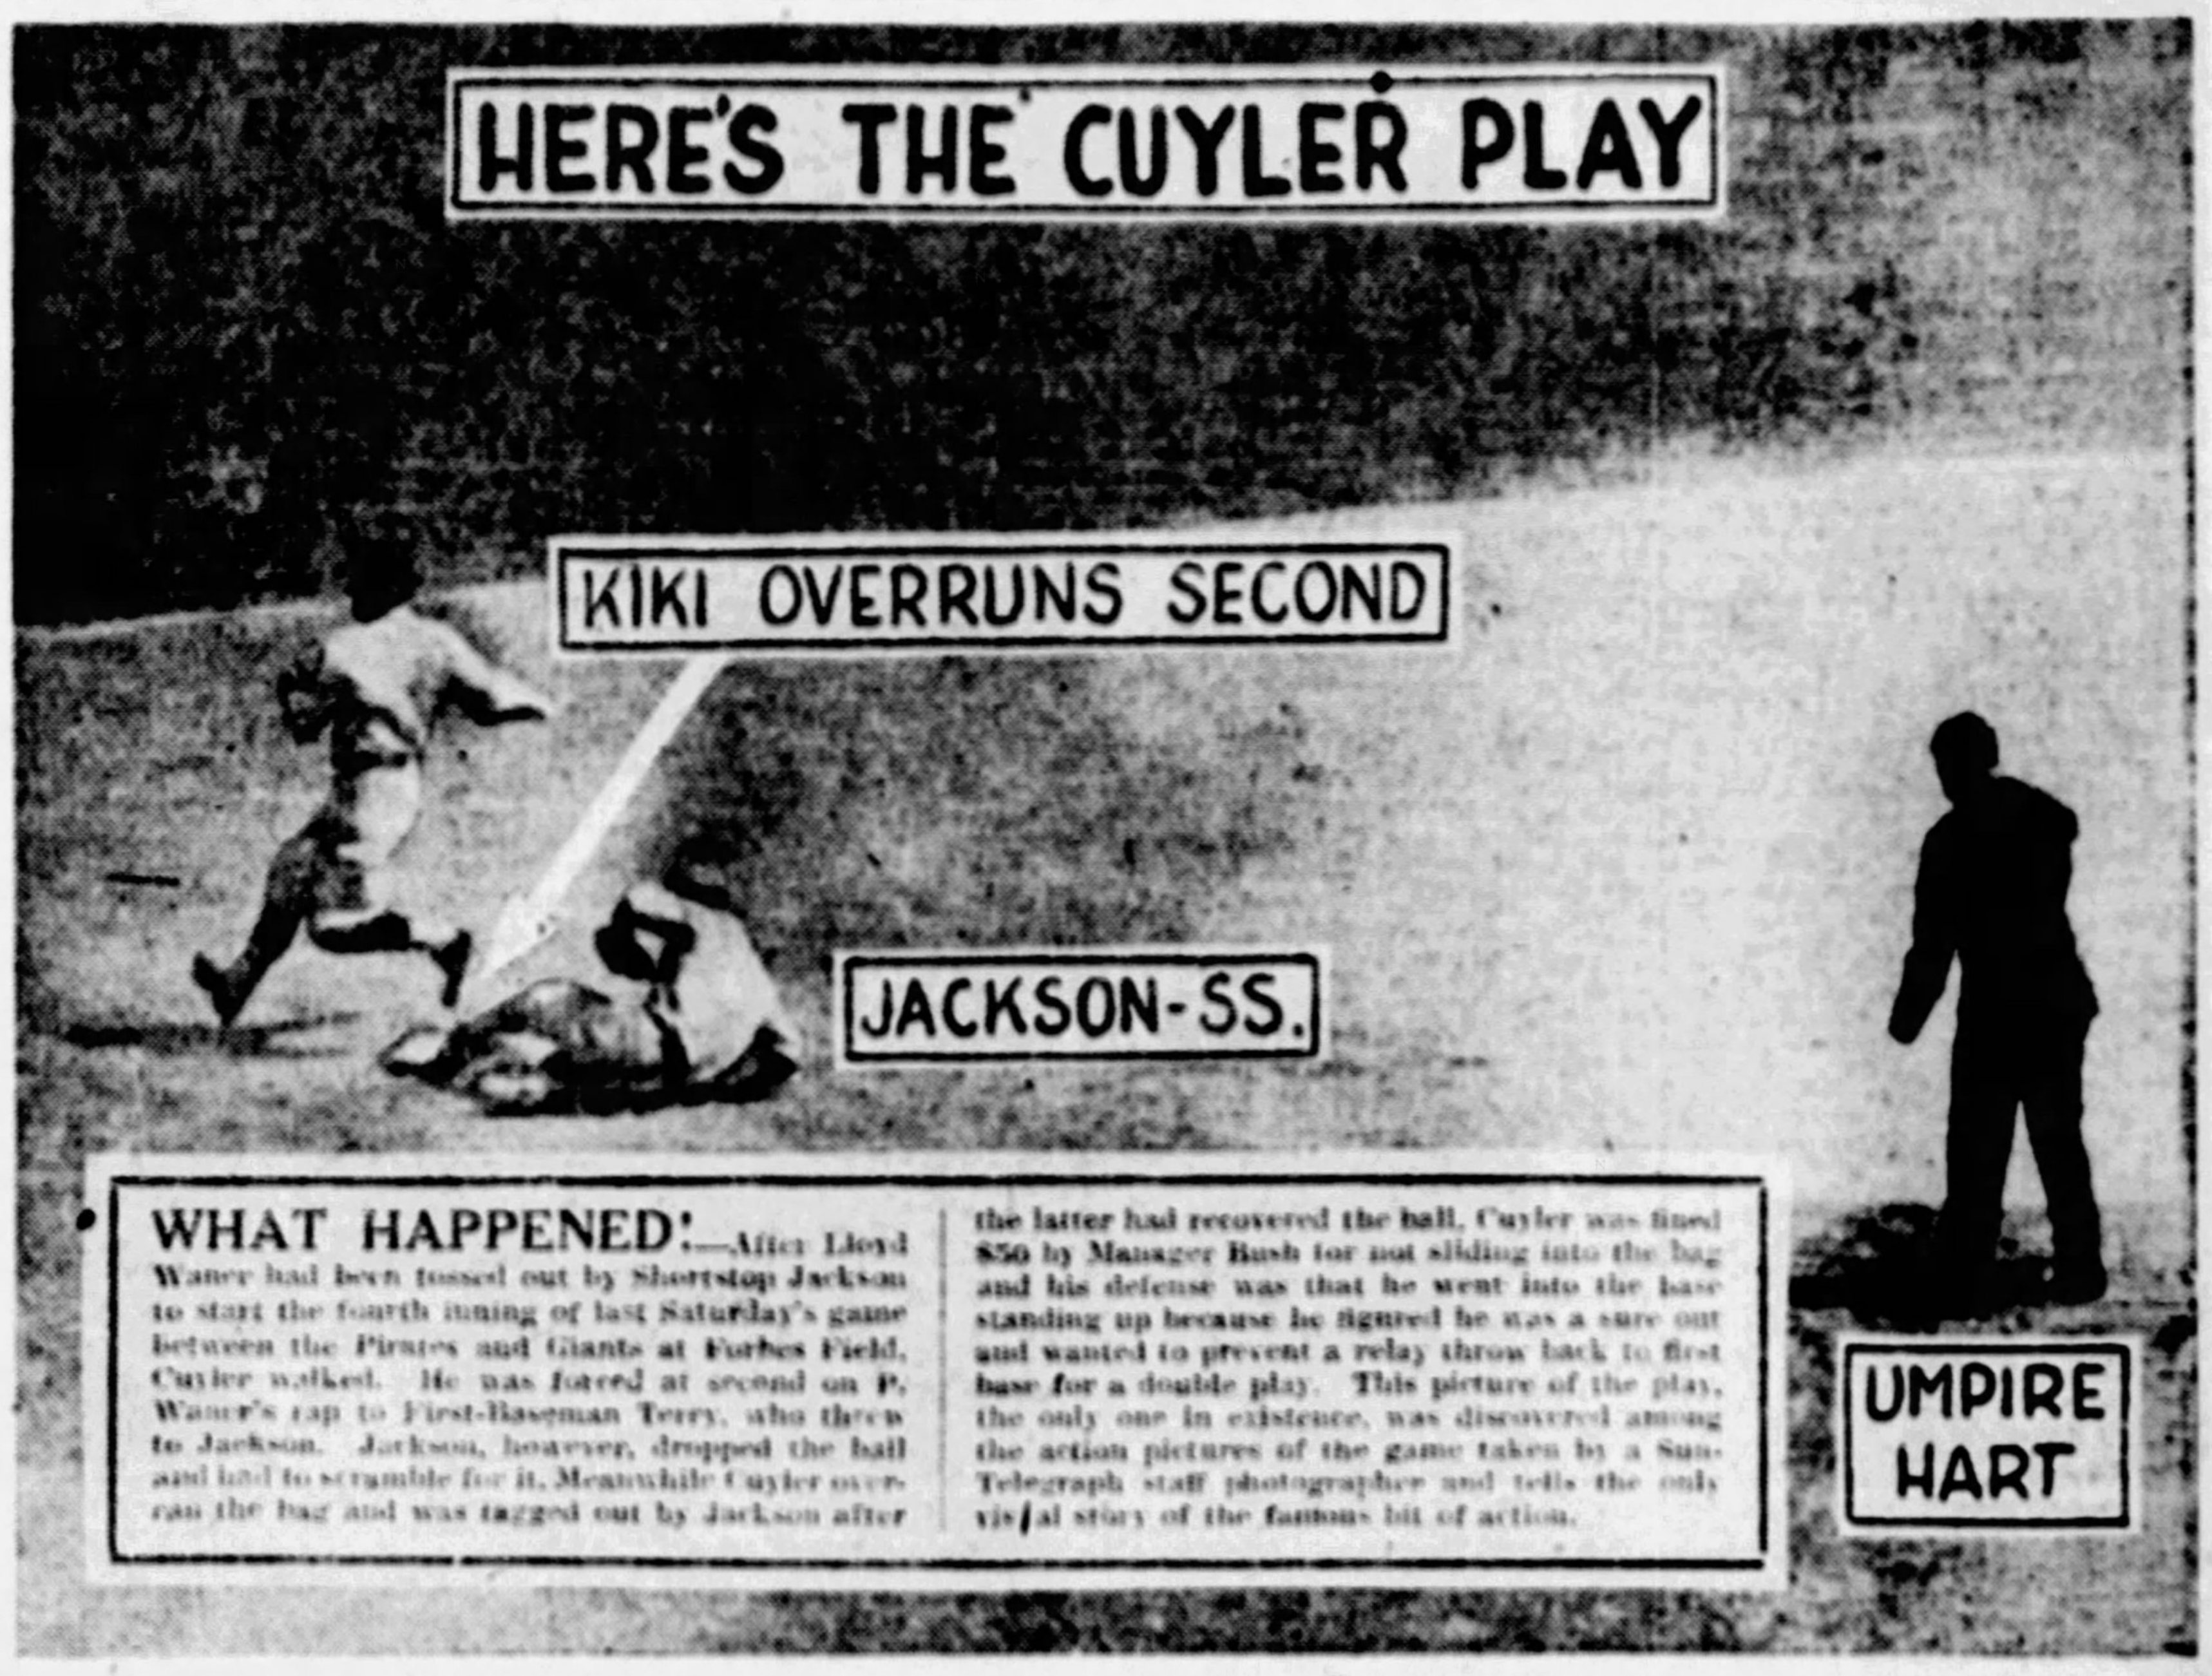
Life seemed to hold little more than stark discouragement for Jimmy Dime last fall, yet he would not admit defeat. He wouldn't say die.

And he won't say die now.

Jimmy was a fighter and a foot-racer in his younger days. He fought 44 battles in the ring against the best men at 128 pounds and scored 41 knockouts, which probably explains why he was able to make good punchers out of virtually all the men he later managed. For a time he was athletic coach at Union College up in New York state, and was boxing instructor to the late Teddy Roosevelt when the later President was Governor of New York. He is now around the three score mark in years and only recently has discarded his crutches for a cane, and Ed Fritz writes me that, far from thinking of retiring, Jimmy is looking forward to the day when he again will be able to develop a good heavyweight. He always had his best luck with heavyweights, and is hoping that he yet will realize his ambition of managing a heavyweight champion.

Such a spirit of NEVER-SAY-DIE is not easily crushed. I am happy to report that the spirit lives in the body of Jimmy Dime, the man for whose whereabouts the world still asks, although he long has been removed from the madding throng.

CAMERA'S STORY OF PLAY ON CUYLER



WHAT HAPPENED!—After Lloyd Waner had been tossed out by Shortstop Jackson to start the fourth inning of last Saturday's game between the Pirates and Giants at Forbes Field, Cuyler walked. He was forced at second on P. Waner's rap to First-Baseman Terry, who threw to Jackson. Jackson, however, dropped the ball and had to scramble for it. Meanwhile Cuyler overran the bag and was tagged out by Jackson after the latter had recovered the ball. Cuyler was fined $50 by Manager Bush for not sliding into the bag and his defense was that he went into the base standing up because he figured he was a sure out and wanted to prevent a relay throw back to first base for a double play. This picture of the play, the only one in existence, was discovered among the action pictures of the game taken by a Sun-Telegraph staff photographer and tells the only visual story of the famous bit of action.

WAS CUYLER OR BUSH RIGHT?

The argument over whether or not Kiki Cuyler of the Pirates merited the $50 fine tacked on him by Manager Donie Bush for his failure to slide into second base at Forbes Field last Saturday continues unabated. Above for the first time is shown a picture of the play. Study it and then think over the situation again. Cuyler said he went into the base standing up because he wanted to prevent a double play via the throw-to-first route after he had been forced. As it happened, Shortstop Jackson lost the ball and had to sprawl after it and was in no position to make a throw. In view of this, was or was not Manager Bush correct in his contention that Kiki should have "hit the dirt" and made sure of hooking his feet into the base?

RACES TODAY DESPITE INJURY

FAVORITE ESCAPES DEATH

Fred Harder of Detroit, winner of the Memorial Day and July Fourth races at the Bridgeville Speedway, who is the favorite with the fans again today, when 25 and 75-mile races are being run. He was badly shaken up in an accident after qualifying late yesterday, but announced he would start anyway.

PHILADELPHIA CO. HOST AT TRACK MEET TODAY

The Philadelphia Company is host this afternoon at Schenley Oval at one of the biggest track and field meets ever offered free to Pittsburgh fans. More than 500 local athletes are entered in the amateur and public utilities corporation events. Thirty contests are on the program, which is to be climaxed by a trotting race put on by the Schenley Matinee Club. Free bus service from the entrance to the park to the oval has been arranged.

Injured Favorite Races At Bridgeville Today

Although badly shaken up by an accident that occurred after he had qualified late yesterday for today's race at the Bridgeville board speedway, Fred Harder of Detroit, winner of the first races staged at that track on Memorial Day and July Fourth, announced this morning that he would participate in one of the two events on the program and hoped to turn in his third victory. Mechanics worked all night on his car, and if it is not in shape for the race Harder will start behind another mount.

The accident which saw Harder have a miraculous escape from death was caused when his car swerved as he was slowing down after qualifying. The machine turned over several times and crashed through a guard rail, tearing away 30 feet of the protective barrier. Less than a dozen drivers had qualified at this time and it was necessary to call off the remainder of the qualifying tests until this morning while workmen repaired the damage.

THRILLS EXPECTED

The races will be over the 25-mile and 75-mile routes and the first one—over the short distance—is scheduled for 3:30 o'clock, daylight saving time. There will be little delay between the events. Train left the Union Station for the

MEADOWS "HOPE" TODAY

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,
Staff Correspondent.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 13.—Realizing they would drop into third place with another defeat, the Pirates today were ready to go the limit of the law to defeat the Cardinals in the third game of the series. This morning found them tied for second place.

Defeated twice in succession in one of the greatest series of the year in the National League, the Bushwhackers are not allowing their tough breaks to get them down.

The Oaklanders made a heroic fight again yesterday, but they were defeated again, the fight reaching the eleventh inning before Sunny Jim Bottomley poled the ball into the short right-field stands for another homer that gave Sunny Jim two victories. His homer of the previous day won the game by the same score, 2 to 1.

Held to four hits in 11 frames by the skill of Jess Haines, the Pittsburghers did not seem to have any base hit license to win the hot encounter, but on the other hand, Carmen Hill gave a remarkable exhibition of pitching, the spectacled hurler, in conjunction with Earl Smith, showing St. Louis fans an exhibition that for smartness was hard to excell.

BOTTOMLEY HITS HOMER.

Carmen of Corry appeared to be showing signs of the terrific strain under which he labored as Bottomley came up to open the eleventh for the Redbirds. In any event, Bottomley took a "cut" at the first pitch and his drive rode into the right-field seats. There was a scene of great joy on the field as Jim wended his way around the bases with the winning run.

It was Ladies' Day and there were more than 15,000 women and girls in the park. Except for those who had to leave to cook dad's supper, the women stayed to the finish and when Bottomley drove the ball into the seats he was circled by fans of the feminine gender as well as by the men folks and boys. The array of colors in the assemblage of fair ones gave the contest a remarkable touch.

Hill and Smith gave the battle a thrilling touch in the ninth when the home foe all but won the game. The same dangerous Bottomley soaked a liner against the right-field stands to open the inning. He carried the winning counter to third on Southworth's sacrifice.

STRATEGY "WORKS"

Donie Bush and his assistants held up the game until they went into a huddle with strategy as the main issue. After the conference

At Emory Church

THE REV. T. B. COURTICE

The pulpit of the Emory Methodist Episcopal church will be occupied Sunday by the Rev. T. B. Courtice of the Oakland Methodist Episcopal Church.

CHURCHES HOLD JOINT SERVICES

Community religious services will be held indoors and outdoors will be conducted tomorrow night at several points in Pittsburgh and the suburbs. Protestant churches of Squirrel Hill, Oakland, Bloomfield and Shadyside will assemble at Carnegie Music Hall. The Rev. H. T. [illegible], of Homewood Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, will preach at joint services of Homewood-Brushton churches in Westinghouse Park. Union services of Shady avenue churches will be held on the lawn of Calvary Episcopal Church.

Parishioners of churches in the North Boroughs will meet at Bellevue Y. M. C. A., where the Rev. Frank G. Helme, pastor of Bellevue Christian Church, will preach at outdoor exercises in West Park. A sermon will be preached by the Rev. F. E. Robb of the First United Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia. Union services will be held also at the Eighth United Presbyterian Church, North Side.

COLLECTION TO BE TAKEN FOR DE PAUL INSTITUTE

A letter announcing that a collection for the De Paul Institute will be taken in all Catholic churches in Western Pennsylvania and urging liberal contributions has been sent to 700,000 members of the church by Bishop Hugh C. Boyle. The collection will be taken at services on Sunday, August 21, and the letter will be read at all masses tomorrow. De Paul Institute, in Brookline, is an oral school for the deaf.

POLISH CHURCH DEAN TO SPEAK ON NORTH SIDE

The Very Rev. Joseph Kula, dean of the Polish National Catholic church, will preach at the high mass tomorrow morning in the Episcopal Emmanuel Chapel at Allegheny and North avenue. The Rev. D. Soltynski will hold services tomorrow morning in Carnegie and in the afternoon the memorial and remembrance ceremony for Polish patriots will be held at Carnegie Library at Carnegie.

ENSIGN BROWN TO LEAD ARMY SERVICES TODAY

Ensign Helen Brown, a divisional headquarters officer, will be the chief speaker at services under the auspices of the Salvation Army in their Second avenue auditorium tomorrow. She will speak at the regular morning, afternoon and evening services. Open air services at Smithfield and Diamond streets will precede each of the auditorium meetings.

WAR VETERANS INDORSE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS

Explaining their action by the fact that the present Board of County Commissioners have placed more than 500 former service men in positions directly under their control, 2,000 war veterans have signed a petition urging Commissioners Armstrong, Babcock and Houlahen to run for re-election and pledging support. The petition was presented to the commissioners today by a committee composed of former Commissioner Robert S. Cain, John L. Bingham, state commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars; Gilbert Cleenan and Cedric C. Bena.

BRENTON WOMEN FORM MINERS' AUXILIARY

Women of Brenton, wives, sisters and daughters of members of the United Mine Workers of America, organized an auxiliary at Brenton last night, to look after the welfare of the families of miners. Mrs. Christopher Marchbank was elected president. The meeting was addressed by President P. T. Fagan of District No. 5 and Thomas Patterson, the district organizer for the Mine Workers.

South is the dealer. What is the proper bidding and play?

In the next issue Mr. Whitehead will explain the salient points in the bidding and play of the above hand. Fill out your own chart and compare it with his method.

These hands must not be bid or played "Double Dummy," i. e., as though all four hands were exposed.

NOTE—In recording the Auction, or the play use "S" for Spades, "H" for Hearts, "D" for Diamonds, and "C" for Clubs. Use "N. T." for No Trump, "DBL" for double, "REDBL" for redouble.

Final Bid 4 C Played by East

Salient Points of the Bidding

North's informatory double is made in hopes of obtaining the contract cheaply at Spades, rather than with any expectation, after his partner's pass, of going game. North is prepared, however, to support a Major response by his partner. East's hand is entirely too weak for a bid immediately following the double. To the surprise of North, South responds with a Spade bid. West cannot rebid the four-card Diamond suit nor take a chance at Hearts or Clubs, so doubles informatorily to force a bid from his partner. North attempts to shut East out by jumping to three Spades, but in view of his partner's desire for a bid and North's reluctance to allow one to be made, East properly shows his six-card Club suit containing three honors.

A national movement is under way to promote singing among policemen.

Why not?

They can drive out the crooks with "Sweet Adeline."

Soon the papers will tell how—

Officer Soandso discovered the bank robbers at work.

He had to think fast. Hastily unrolling his sheet music, the lone policeman started, "The End of a Perfect Day."

The robbers hastily dropped their tools and departed in a high powered car.

Officer Soandso gave chase, singing "Old Black Joe" until the crooks had crossed the ferry.

ALL IN!

Sweet Thing—My husband says there's something wrong with the tire.

Garageman—I don't see anything wrong with the tire, but there's something amiss with the exhaust.

Sweet Thing—Oh, yes, that's it. I knew it was something about the car's fatigue.

DON'T—PLEASE DO!

George—What would you do if I kissed you?

Helen—I'd call grandma—dear old grandma, who is so very deaf.

NERVE RASPING.

"And my snoring annoys you?"

"Oh, I don't mind your sawing wood, but every once in a while you hit a rusty nail."

CERTAINLY!

It's Time to Call a Halt on Reckless Waste of Oil Supply

What has the Federal Oil Conservation Board to report, after nearly three years of organization?

President Coolidge appointed it on December 19, 1924. He appointed it because he saw that our present methods of extracting oil were indefensibly wasteful. His letter appointing the board began:

> "It is evident that the present methods of capturing our oil deposits are wasteful to an alarming degree.
> "Developing aircraft indicate that our national defense must be supplemented, if not dominated, by aviation. It is even probable that the supremacy of nations may be determined by the possession of available petroleum and its products."

When the President wrote that letter, we were taking 1,850,000 barrels of oil daily out of the ground. Today we are extracting 2,500,000 barrels a day.

In order to get rid of the vast surplus thus dragged up out of its natural storage underground, we burn crude oil and fuel oil under boilers that should be heated by coal.

We dot the seas with tankers hurrying our oil abroad to be sold for a song to other nations.

There is no private advantage to offset this loss to the nation. The $11,000,000,000 oil industry is being forced to the verge of bankruptcy in the cutthroat price competition of corporations fighting to get rid of our most precious resource.

It is time for the Federal government to step in and call a halt, to save the oil for the nation and to save the oil companies from themselves.

In President Coolidge's letter he foresaw that the oil industry would not be able to regulate itself. He said:

> "The oil industry might be permitted to determine its own future. That future might be left to the simple working of the law of supply and demand but for the patent fact that the oil industry's welfare is so intimately linked with the industrial prosperity and safety of the whole people, that government and business can well join forces to work out this problem of practical conservation."

In the next Congress a bill will be introduced, providing for regulation of drilling and oil prices, along the lines of the Interstate Commerce act regulating the railroads. It will be one of the most important pieces of legislation confronting us.

Latest Bill For Farm Relief As Faulty as Vetoed Scheme

The Farm Bureau Federation has drafted and published a bill for farm relief which they claim has the sanction of President Coolidge. That does not seem credible, for the bill has nearly all the bad features of the old McNary-Haugen bill, which the President courageously vetoed last session.

This new bill, like the old one, provides a "revolving fund" which is to be available for buying up surplus crops of farm produce whose prices do not suit the Federal Farm Board. The surplus is to be purchased and taken off the market until the domestic price is raised to the level desired by the Farm Board.

In last year's bill the revolving fund was $250,000,000 out of the government treasury. This year it is $300,000,000. In last year's bill it was provided that the farmers were to be assessed to recoup the treasury for losses to the "revolving fund," if its speculation in buying surplus crops should turn out badly. In this year's bill there is no such levy on the farmers. The $300,000,000 is simply to be advanced to farmers' co-operative organizations to enable them to buy and hold surplus production, or dump it on foreign markets. If there is a loss, it falls on the "revolving fund," entirely, without recourse.

Now, most of us would not object to spending $300,000,000 to help the farmers if this method would really help them. Instead, it would harm them. The certain effect of the price guarantee will be to stimulate heavier planting and further production of the very commodities whose surplus is evidence that they are being too heavily produced already.

How can President Coolidge, regarding this year's measure, refrain from this comment in his veto of last year's bill:

> "The chief objection to the bill is that it would not benefit the farmer. Whatever may be the temporary influence of arbitrary interference, no one can deny that in the long run prices will be governed by the law of supply and demand.
> "To expect to increase prices and then to maintain them on a higher level by means of a plan which must of necessity increase production while decreasing consumption, is to fly in the face of an economic law as well established as any law of nature."

Talk About the Weather

It seems to be a trait of the so-called human nature to complain.

And by experience most of us have learned that there is no use complaining about things we can fix or right or straighten out. But we all love to complain about things over which we have no control—and of these chief of all is the weather.

In the winter we complain about the cold. In the summer we complain about the heat. On rainy days we complain of getting soaked, and when it is dry over a prolonged period we complain of the drought.

It is too bad that most of us can't do the fashionable thing:

Summer on the seas and abroad.
Fall in a North Wood hunting lodge.
Early Winter at the town house.
Midwinter in Florida, California or the Lido.
Early Spring back to the city for the theatre.
Late Spring a fishing trip in Canada.

There you have the ideal existence—move from month to month, doing things you like to do and finding weather you like.

More Truth Than Poetry
by S. E. Kiser

Still Taking Notice

HE saw proud people pass along,
And doubtfully he shook his head;
The weak shrank back before the strong.
Within him lurked oppressive dread.
"What fools they are," he thought, "to let
Their riches cause them to forget.

"CORRUPTION tramples on the law,
The greedy reach for more and more,
A danger that our sires foresaw
Skulks close beside the temple door,
But recklessly the fools proceed,
Too blind to see, too dull to heed.

"THEY scoff if wretched men complain,
If Poverty cries out they sneer,
But some day they will plead in vain,
When frenzied mobs refuse to hear.
What fools, to let their pride obscure
The horrors they are making sure!"

THEN someone lightly touched his arm,
And suddenly his fears took flight.
She spoke; her smile was full of charm,
Her voice was soft, her teeth were white;
He told her how to find her way;
Her beauty caused him to feel gay.

HE watched her as she turned to go;
What grace she had! He moved along;
Her loveliness had pleased him so
That nothing in the world seemed wrong.
In rakish wise he cocked his hat,
And thought: "I'm not so old, at that!"

Tales that are Told

Useful

"SAY, Gap!" began Mrs. Johnson. "Won't you go ahead and talk for a spell about flying across the Atlantic Ocean, or something of the sort?"

"Huh!" ejaculated Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge. "I hain't interested in no such foolishness."

"Neither is the baby, but I reckon your talk will put him to sleep."

His Reward

"WELL," said the vicar, a Welshman, "for 40 years have you been a most kind and attentive servant to me, John, and I've never done much for you in return."

John blinked unhappily. This was the master in a new light. He did not know what to think or do.

"Oh, indeed, sir, you've been kind at times," he said at length.

"Have I?" returned the vicar. "Perhaps I have. But now I intend to reward you for all these things. From now I make you one of the family. You receive no pay."—London Answers.

Off the Roll

THE Bessborough was recognized as one of the most exclusive clubs, and numbered several royalties among its members. The club had been in existence many years.

One day a member, who had grown a beard, turned up after a long absence. The doorman failed to recognize him and asked his name.

"Henry the Eighth," replied the gentleman without hesitation.

The doorman consulted a printed member list, ran his eye down the "H's" and closed the book with a bang.

"No longer a member, sir," he answered decisively.

BE A PITTSBURGH BOOSTER
To Your Friends in Other Cities

New York Day by Day
by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—Manhattan's superiority in handling big crowds in emergency is one of the most striking things about the metropolis. No celebration has proved too big and there have been some whoppers in the last few years.

There are no hard riding Russian methods. The police have a coaxing manner that never seems to fail. I have often noted a flying wedge cutting a path through a jam. It suggests a keen blade going through a cake.

"Give way a little, please, ladies and gentlemen," a police captain will suggest and the crowds respond to the polite gesture almost invariably. About the only time the crowd got out of bounds in recent years was at the Valentino bier and even then it resulted only in a few smashed windows.

All this, despite the fact it is the largest city and nowhere is curiosity so pronounced. The departure of a movie star on the first lap of the journey to Hollywood will often pack one of the large railroad terminals.

The police have been trained to know that the spirit of a crowd, touched by fear, is destructive. It is a spark that may incite a holocaust. So their attitude becomes jovial and coaxing. If someone becomes obstreperous, he is shamed out of it. It is the sort of horse sense often called psychology.

It has been possible to fool a crowd by spiriting the celebrity through some secret passage. This is rarely done, for a crowd thus fooled often becomes dangerous. It was tried once many years ago with a pugilist champion and many were trampled.

A marital triangle of Greenwich Village has spawned a literary triangle. A novelist left his wife for one he considered a fairer charmer and then wrote a book about it. His deserted wife encompassed her reactions in a volume. And now the woman who caused it all has given her novelized version.

George Ade, Nellie Revell and Jay House have recently put my first name in quotes—thus "Odd." A silly name, but my own, and I prefer it unquoted.

Two comedians in a musical show have a hilarious face smacking scene which starts off with gentle pats and grows into thunderous broadsides. A remarkable thing is that there has not yet appeared a press agent fable that they have quit speaking off stage.

Many believe the temporary breach that sprang up between Lew Fields and Joe Weber resulted from years of Fields choking and eye-gouging Weber, although it was attributed to other things. And that Buster Keaton had any affection at all for his father after being slammed around as he was most of his life is a big boost for filial devotion.

An uncle once gave me a swift, well placed and deserved kick. Ever after in passing him I would give a quick involuntary bend as though expecting another.

The stranger who leaves Manhattan's roar for Brooklyn is invariably impressed with the peaceful charm across the bridge. It might be a city hundreds of miles away. There are yards where children play and porches where elders rock. Housekeeping is not entrusted so much to servants. There is a large section of Brooklyn clinging to the old-fashioned Monday washday and servants remain "hired girls," with Thursday afternoons off. Home life there has not become mechanically standardized and one has a feeling that most husbands are home at night. That is often a phenomenon in Manhattan.

Inheritance
By DR. FRANK CRANE

Most normal men and women live for their children.

Beyond getting what satisfaction they can out of their own lives, they want to see their children get satisfaction out of theirs, they want to see they have a better chance and more advantages than they themselves had.

Just how to accomplish this requires much thought and calls for all our intelligent planning.

It is pretty well established that leaving your children a lot of money does them no good. More wrecks have been caused, more lives ruined and more characters undermined by having things made too easy for children, by giving them too many unearned advantages, than by anything else.

It may be safely concluded that if any man has a grudge against his children and wants them to be failures the surest way is to leave them a lot of money.

Thinking people know that other things, such as character and the like, count more than money.

Just how to leave our dear ones what they require is rather difficult.

In the first place, we ought to do what we can to bequeath to them an orderly and law-abiding society, a state in which the laws are respected and obeyed. People, therefore, that countenance bootlegging and other illicit acts which happen to be popular, are working for a state of society which will be inimicable to the coming generation.

The second thing is character. It is our duty to our children to give them a good biological inheritance. This we can do by living clean lives ourselves and, in the final analysis, most of the good we do other people depends on how well we take care of ourselves.

If the children are healthy and strong and normal physically the next thing they need is moral character.

Unfortunately, this is a more difficult thing to come at. Out of many a family with the highest ideals and the most blameless practices can come a descendant who is absolutely lacking in moral stamina. About all we can do is to give as good an example as possible and good teaching. The result then is in the lap of the gods. We can't help it and we are not to blame if the young scion turns out crooked. It is lamentable, but it is inevitable.

Another thing we can leave our children is friendship and association with the right kind of people. This we can only do by association with the right kind of people ourselves.

The best that can be done, in a nutshell, is to know our children, be companions with them and influence them by our own character as much as possible.

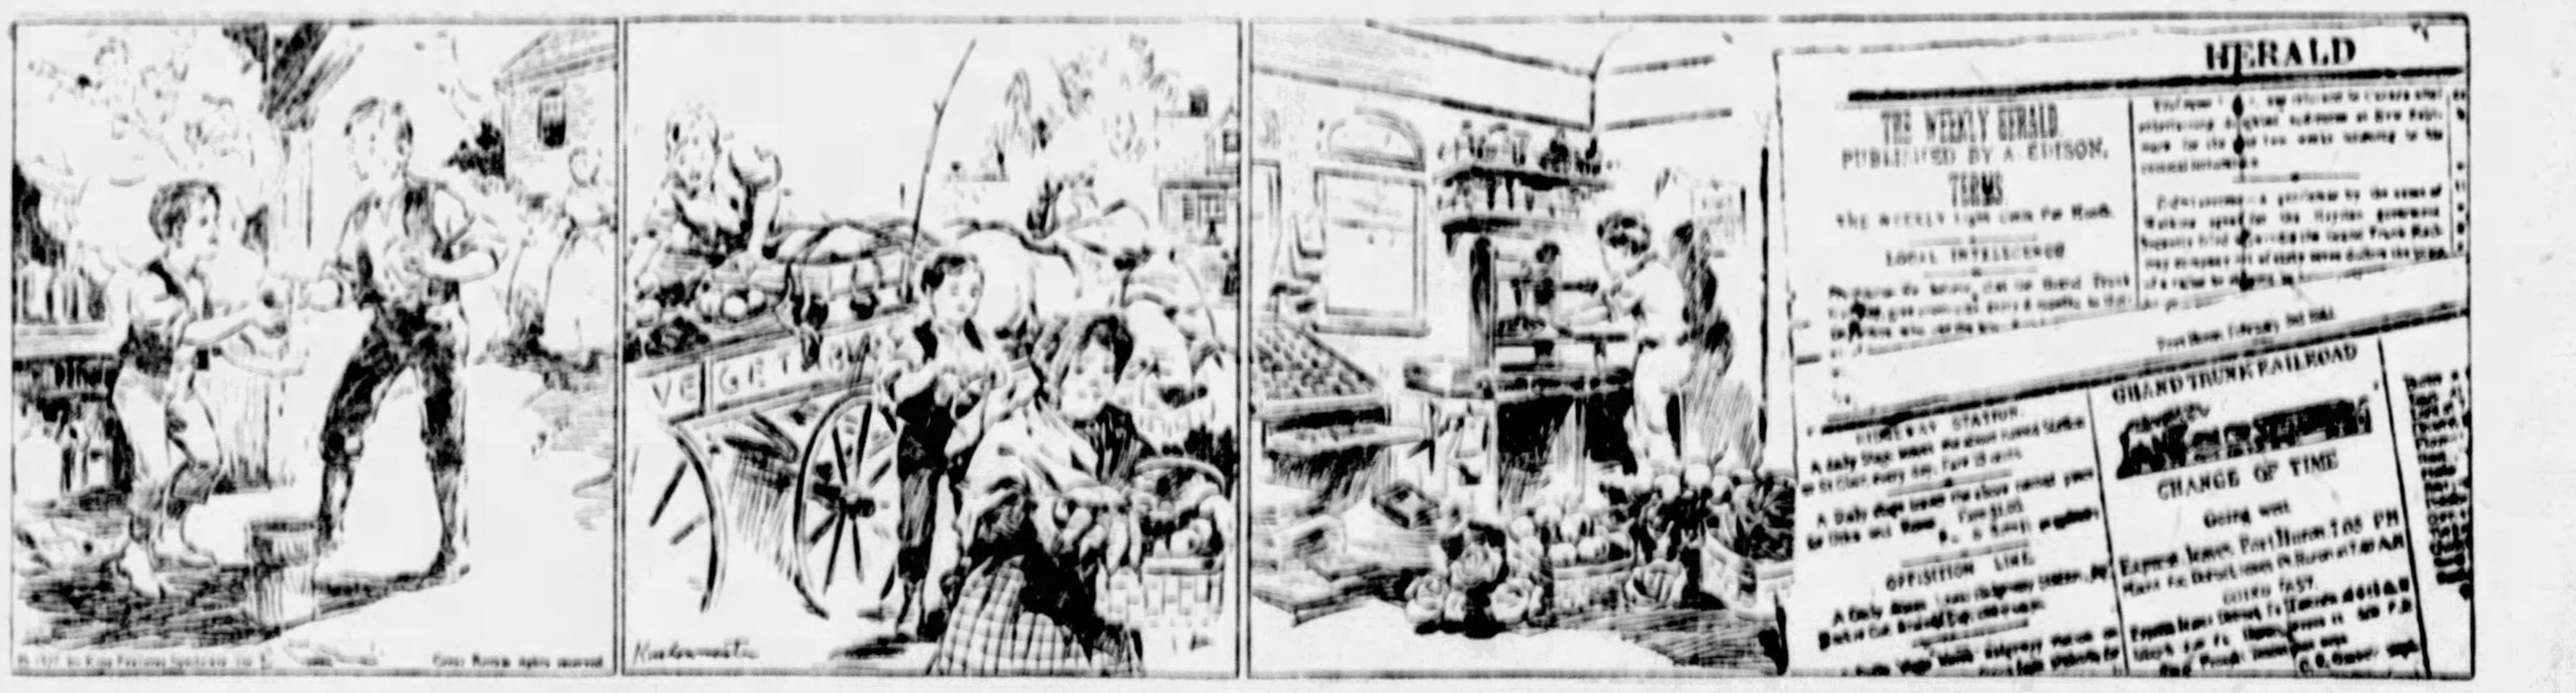
THE LIFE OF THOMAS A. EDISON

(Authorized and Endorsed by Mr. Edison)

Text by Arthur J. Palmer
Drawings by Frank Kuchenmeister



IN order to test a chemical theory, Edison induced his father's chore boy, Michael Oates, to swallow a quantity of seidlitz powders, believing that the gases thus generated would enable him to fly. The only results were pains in the stomach for Michael and a vigorous application for young "Al" of the long switch which Edison's mother kept behind the grandfather's clock.

IN those early days, Michael Oates was young Edison's "man Friday." The father, Samuel Edison, had a market garden and the two boys would drive a horse and small wagon to town with vegetables, on which they realized as much as $600 in one year. This considerable sum, for those days, was turned over to the safekeeping of Edison's grateful and thrifty mother.

WHEN he was between twelve and thirteen years of age Edison became newsboy on the Grand Trunk local between Port Huron and Detroit. He established a storeroom in the baggage car for papers, candy, etc. Later he set up a second-hand printing press on which he printed his own "Weekly Herald," the first newspaper ever to be printed on a moving train.

AS far back as 1910 only two copies of Edison's Weekly Herald were known to exist. It was printed on the front and back of a single sheet and was commented on by the London Times. That great paper recognized it as a remarkable product for a boy of fifteen. Edison was everything from publisher to distributor, and he was proud of his achievement. (Continued Monday)
